SUMMARY.

Rome and Petrograd messages state that splendid results have been gained by the Roumanian attacks.

The army is already in possession of every important pass leading to Transylvania.

The Austrians admit that they are withdrawing, being evidently unable to hold the frontier.

Vienna newspapers announce that the General Staff is considering the evacuation of all south-eastern Transylvania.

A large part of the population on the frontier of Hungary is flying into the interior.

Budapest newspapers declare that the invading forces outnumber the Hungarians fourfold.

The Hungarians are clamouring for Hungarian troops to defend Hungary. Relations with Austria are approaching a crisis.

A Paris report states that Germany has despatched towards Roumania nine divisions from France.

The Berlin newspapers announce that the Roumanians, advancing on Hermannstadt, have junctioned with the troops from Brasso.

The Russians and Roumanians are also in touch in Bukovina, where heavy fighting is taking place.

German correspondents at the Austrian headquarters urge the public not to be alarmed at further retirements.

They admit that the Austrians cannot hold along the new front, and that further retirements are inevitable.

Bulgaria, it is said, asks for the assistance of 200,000 Turkish troops as a condition to declaring war upon Roumania.

The Roumanian Legation in Rome states that the resistance of the enemy is everywhere shattered.

It is officially announced in Bucharest that the Russians are passing through Dobrudja.

They are being enthusiastically welcomed by the population of the province.

Latest telegrams from Athens indicate that the Bulgarians are retreating from Greece.

M. Zaimis, the Premier of Greece, has resigned. It is expected that M. Venizelos will be called to power.

It is believed that the elevation of M. Venizelos to the Premiership will be followed by a declaration of war on the Central Powers.

Despatches from Athens state that Greece will probably abandon her neutrality within 48 hours.

King Constantine will receive the Russian, French, and British Ministers. All staff officers have been recalled.

The Russians have repelled attacks on the west bank of the Stokhod, 34 miles north-east of Kovel, with heavy enemy losses.

A German communique says that artillery battles have taken place at Dunaberg, west of Riga.

French military critics point out that the British continue to progress towards Thiepval.

The British occupy all the dominating heights between Mouquet Farm and Courcelette, thus dominating Thiepval.

In the Martinpuich operations, 126 Bavarians did not attempt to return to their lines, but surrendered.

An Amsterdam message states that the population of Berlin hails Field-Marshal von Hindenburg as the deliverer.

A Paris message says:—The failure at Verdun has cost General von Falkenhayn his place in Imperial favour.

The Italians repulsed Austrian attacks on the Upper Posina and in the Astico Valley.

The enemy is trying to consolidate in the Gorizia and Carso areas.

When the House of Representatives reassembled the Prime Minister resumed his speech which he began on Wednesday.

He insisted that the scheme put forward was the best and speediest method, and he expected a big majority at the referendum.

He denied that the Government proposals meant delay. To have brought in compulsion would have inflamed party feeling.

Mr. Hughes said there were ample troops at present in camp to supply requirements to January.

The Minister for Defence in the Senate also made an explanation of the Government's proposals.

The obligation was laid upon their opponents to say, he remarked, that men should be sent oversea without their consent.

Senator Pearce announces that all soldiers over 21 at home or abroad will have a vote on the referendum.

There was a pronounced falling off in recruiting yesterday, only 70 men being accepted.

The Assembly adjourned at an early hour last evening, two of the Ministry who had charge of business being out of town.

The Premier was asked whether he would take the Upper House referendum at the same time as that on conscription.

"The suggestion is a very pregnant one. I will give it consideration," Mr. Holman replied.

At the weekly meeting of the Red Cross Executive a vote of £500 to the Italian Red Cross Society was passed.

A vote of £10,000 was also passed to replenish the grant required for the oversea expenditure by the Australian branch.

A deputation from the School of Arts waited on the Lord Mayor to request exemption from unimproved capital value rates.

The Lord Mayor expressed his sympathy, but said he would refer the matter to the finance committee.

The Rejected Volunteers' Association is asking employers to pledge themselves to provide work for returned soldiers.

The association has also decided to erect as many cottage homes as possible for soldiers' widows.

The P.L.L. executive has endorsed the candidature of Mr. G. A. Burgess for Burrangong in the Labour interest.

The case against the four men charged with being concerned in the forgery of £5 banknotes was again adjourned yesterday.

The police explained that 5000 notes had been put off in various States, and numerous inquiries had to be made.

The 204th Australian casualty list records a total of 13 officers and 894 men wounded.

Difficulty is being experienced in obtaining sufficient supplies of water-marked postage stamp paper.

The postal authorities are to be empowered to tax posted articles on which more stamps than are necessary are placed.

A favourable report was submitted at the annual meeting of the Association for the Protection of Native Races.

An improvement in the condition of the native races was indicated.

At the annual meeting of the Highland Society it was reported that there was a surplus on the year's working.

A roll of honour bearing the names of members of the Pipe Band who had enlisted was unveiled.

The proposed crematorium at Vaucluse is to be further considered by Mr. Black in the light of objections raised.

The next English mail, via Suez, by the Karmala, is expected on Wednesday. An American mail is due on Tuesday.

On the Stock Exchange yesterday the market for mining shares was exceedingly dull, and prices were inclined to drop.

The month opened brightly in the dairy section of the Sussex-street markets, but there were no alterations in quotations.

Butter continued scarce; bacon was firm; and cheese was in moderate request at previous levels.

The Attorney-General was asked in the Assembly to take drastic action in connection with the butter shortage.

Mr. Hall said there was no room for two Governments in the business. The Federal Government had taken it over.

Forecast.—Fine generally, except for some showers on the North Coast; winds veering northerly, and becoming warmer.

CHAPMAN MARINE MOTORS.

Owing to the fact that myself and employees having volunteered in a body to go to England at an early date, for the purpose of assisting the Empire in the manufacture of Munitions, my Works will be closed down until further notice. I regret that so many intending buyers of my engines have to be disappointed, and that no further business can be entertained. But, on the termination of the War I hope to be able to again manufacture the "CHAPMAN" ENGINES in sufficient quantities to meet all demands. Thanking my many Patrons for their kind support,

Faithfully yours,

Doug. was a poor artist. He fell in love with a beautiful society maiden, but mother said he must have the cash. There was nothing left but death. Unfortunately, the penny-in-the-slot meter ran out before he died, and he had therefore to hire a professional assassin to put him out of his misery. Then Doug. inherited a million. Mother-in-law relented, he married the girl, started off on the honeymoon with the assassin hot on his track. It was more than awkward. It was decidedly unpleasant.

in the price of Photographic Material and the difficulty in securing supplies created a time of great anxiety for all Photographers. Now that the French and English makers have taken vigorous steps to supply Australia's needs the immediate anxiety is past, but all available supplies will be at once absorbed in view of the great demand arising from the needs of our soldier boys.

In spite of all the difficulties that have arisen we have never raised our prices, and are still supplying the highest quality photographs to soldiers and civilians alike at prices below that of any other leading studio.

FIT PALMER CORD TYRES.

Hard pulling up steep hills with a full load means more petrol consumption, and a big strain on tyres. Palmer Cord Tyres give 10 per cent. more distance to the gallon, and stand up under the severest strain. The wonderful impregnated cord foundation has never been equalled—it is a PALMER CORD patent.

MAXWELL "25."

QUALITY in construction, design, finish, appearance—a really high-class Motor Car—that is your first and last impression of the MAXWELL.

In first cost it is less than any other car, offering the same quality and advantages.

In operation—the cost of gasoline and tyres is so low it means the utmost economy.

This combination should make you consider the Maxwell—should mean that you will buy it if you really want value. Let us prove these statements.

"WITHOUT sacrificing a single desirable feature"—that's the astonishing fact when you consider what the MAXWELL will do—what great economy it offers. In an official A.A.A. test the MAXWELL travelled 22,022 miles without a motor stop, making it the World's Champion Endurance Car—this is the car you buy for.

And you do not sacrifice one single detail of finish, appearance, or comfort.

JEFFERY "4."

A NEW KIND OF COMFORT IN A CAR OF MODERATE PRICE.

Here we have chiefly a matter of engineering design, of correct relation between "sprung" and "unsprung" weight, of extra length springs, and proper spring suspension. Jeffery engineers have made a science of these important matters. They have designed and experienced, rejected, and selected, until they have brought into existence a new kind of Motor Car Comfort—a basic comfort which rests for its foundation where it ought to rest, on the underlying chassis of the car.
Then, into the body has been built a luxury of ease which in previous years was found only in the highest-priced cars—soft deep leather upholstery such as characterises the finest types of overstuffed couches, into which one sinks with comfort and contentment; divided front seats providing easy access to the tonneau without stepping from the car, and giving the driver perfect freedom in his control of the car. Even the auxiliary seats have been given the most careful attention. They have been designed by experts whose business it is to create maximum comfort.
Never before has such comfort been offered at a similar price. It is the kind of comfort which enables women to ride or drive all day without fatigue.

3, 5, AND 7 PASSENGER MODELS.

JEFFERY QUAD LORRY.

The JEFFERY QUAD has made the "Power on all four wheels" principle famous the world over. The Quad has demonstrated not only its ability to negotiate mud, sand, snow, and stiff grades that are impossible to Rear drive trucks, but has also proved that "Power on all four wheels" makes a better and more economical truck on good roads.

SIX-CYLINDER BUICK. SUCCESS

ALL OVER THE COUNTRY.

AN UNSOLICITED OPINION.

THE WELL-KNOWN LONDON NEWSPAPER, THE "AUTOCAR," HAS BEEN WRITING A GREAT DEAL THE LAST TWO OR THREE YEARS ON THE SUCCESS OF AMERICAN MOTOR CARS. THIS HAS LED TO A LOT OF CORRESPONDENCE FROM MANY PRIVATE USERS, AND ON JULY 8 THEY PUBLISHED THE FOLLOWING LETTER, WRITTEN BY DR. GORDON CRIBB, OF MILLTHORPE, NEW SOUTH WALES:—

"Reading 'Owen John's' article on the Co-operative Car' in your issue just to hand, I note this paragraph: 'It need not be unsuited for our overseas Dominions and Colonies.' Of many letters since this discussion began, hardly any have come from Colonial owners. I started with a small 10cwt American single-seater. After enduring many things for six months, I was lucky enough to sell it. My next was an English car. This I found utterly unsuitable to Colonial country conditions—too light, ran hot, broke springs en masse, and was always in the repair shop. I then tried another English car, and had the same experience, but in a modified degree, as it weighed a little more. My fourth and present car is a 1914 single-seater Buick, which has proved absolutely satisfactory in all essential respects, and has given me no trouble at all. An up-to-date gas generator, shock absorbers, and one or two small accessories are all that have been found an improvement on a car that is ideal for rough country work in this part of the world. The new 'Sixes' are even better, as they are top-gear propositions, and the electric gear is beyond reproach.

"To my mind, the 'co-operative car,' if it is to compete in this market with the Americans, will need—(1) to weigh at least a ton; (2) to have strong springs and shock absorbers; (3) overhead valves of the Buick type; (4) large radiator, with pump circulation; (5) reliable electric starting and lighting; (6) standard width of track, 4ft 8in; (7) reliable carburettor in accessible position; (8) efficient system of automatic oiling; (9) all vital parts, both of chassis and engine, made accessible; and (10) spare parts available and at a reasonable price.

"It is no good blaming us for buying Yankee cars, when you show us nothing to touch them in suitability for local conditions. Build an English 'Buick,' and you will sell out here as many as you can produce.
"(Signed) A. G. CRIBB, G.M.O., Millthorpe, N.S.W."

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR.

A THREEFOLD COMBINATION

REFINEMENT, EFFICIENCY, AND EQUIPMENT.

HIGHEST QUALITY THROUGHOUT.
MODERATE COST TO PURCHASERS.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR HAS MANY FEATURES THAT ARE UNUSUAL IN A CAR OF SO MODERATE A PRICE, AND REPRESENTS A COMBINATION OF REFINEMENT, EFFICIENCY, AND EQUIPMENT THAT IS OF MORE THAN ORDINARY INTEREST TO THE INTENDING PURCHASER.

THERE HAS BEEN NO EFFORT TO PRODUCE A CAR THAT WOULD SELL AT A LOW PRICE, BUT THERE HAS BEEN A GENUINE INTEREST IN BUILDING A CAR IN WHICH THE MATERIAL, THE DESIGN, AND THE MANUFACTURING PRACTICE WOULD REPRESENT THE HIGHEST QUALITY AT A MODERATE COST TO THE PURCHASER.

DODGE BROTHERS HAVE BROUGHT TO BEAR UPON THE ACCOMPLISHMENT OF THIS PURPOSE AN EXTRAORDINARY EXPERIENCE, IMMENSE PRODUCTION CAPACITY, AND COMPLETE FINANCIAL INDEPENDENCE.

THE MOTOR IS 24 R.A.C. RATING.
THE WHEEL BASE IS 110 INCHES.

SUPERIOR IN CONSTRUCTION.

MODERN AND ECONOMICAL.

EFFICIENCY PROVEN.

Economy in the transportation of all classes of materials is to-day of paramount importance, and is receiving more than ordinary consideration.

Competition is forcing business houses and Public Service Departments to adopt the most modern and economic methods.

The motor truck has proven its efficiency and economy over other methods, and the Garford Motor Truck, on account of design and superior construction, is especially adapted to such work.

HUDSON SUPER-SIX.

GREAT RESERVE POWER.

HIGH SPEED CAPACITY.

LUXURY OF MOTION.

THE OBJECT OF HIGH SPEED IN A MOTOR IS NOT MERELY HIGH SPEED IN THE CAR. IT CAN BE UTILISED FOR SPEED IF YOU WISH IT. BUT THE MAIN OBJECTS ARE POWER, FLEXIBILITY, EASE OF CONTROL, QUICK ACCELERATION, AND RESERVE CAPACITY FOR DIFFICULT ROADS OR HILLS.

A HIGH-SPEED MOTOR ATTAINS POWER WITHOUT CLUMSINESS OR HEAVY WEIGHT. IT MAKES A SMALL MOTOR AS POWERFUL AS A BIG, HEAVY, SLOW-SPEED MOTOR. AND THAT IS ALL IMPORTANT.

IT IS IN THIS MAJOR REQUIREMENT THAT THE HUDSON SUPER-SIX EXCELS EVERY RIVAL. AS COMPARED WITH THE BEST OF FORMER SIXES, IN LIKE SIZE, THE SUPER-SIX DEVELOPS 80 PER CENT. MORE POWER. IT SHOWS 50 PER CENT. HIGHER MOTOR SPEED CAPACITY.

ALL THIS IS ACCOMPLISHED BY ENDING VIBRATION. IT INCLUDES ALL ELSE WHICH PERTAINS TO PERFECT PERFORMANCE, TO LUXURY OF MOTION.

QUALITY SHOWS—it shows first in achievement. Besides giving downright, prolonged, reliable service under all conditions, like all thoroughbreds, Studebaker can do big things.
That notable Australian Record, ALBANY to PERTH, the greatest high-speed cross-country record, averaging 41½ miles per hour, tells the story of quality.
For 64 years Studebaker has been manufacturing quality vehicles, and Studebaker places too high a value on that 64 years' reputation to build less than quality cars.

THE ONLY LIMIT

TO THE SALES OF OAKLAND CARS DEPENDS ENTIRELY ON THE INTEREST EVERY BUYER OF A MOTOR TAKES IN HIS PURCHASE OF ONE.

THOSE PERSONS WHO BUY INDISCRIMINATELY AND DO NOT SUFFICIENTLY STUDY EACH MAKE OFTEN BUY OTHER CARS—BUT THE CAREFUL BUYER INVESTIGATES ALL CARS, AND IT IS THIS SELF-SAME BUYER THAT GENERALLY PURCHASES AN OAKLAND.

EVERY OAKLAND OWNER REALISES THE GENUINE SATISFACTION THAT HE GETS—HE KNOWS THE MONEY IS IN THE CAR AND NOT IN THE LARGE, EXPENSIVE ADVERTISEMENTS SOME FACTORIES PUBLISH.

TWO "OAKLAND" MODELS.

THE SMALLER ONE IS THE LATEST HIGH-SPEED, LIGHT SIX-CYLINDER CAR, WHICH SO FAR HASN'T LOST A BUYER. A CAR SELLING FOR WELL UNDER £400, WITH GREY COLOURING, ELECTRIC SELF STARTING AND LIGHTING SYSTEM, FULL EQUIPMENT FROM HOOD AND SCREEN TO FIVE TYRES ON INTERCHANGEABLE RIMS. A CAR WEIGHING 18½CWT, AVERAGING OVER 25 MILES PER GALLON, ABLE TO CLIMB ALMOST ANY HILL ON HIGH GEAR, AND BUILT IN BOTH FIVE-SEATER AND THREE-SEATER BODIES.

THE LARGER MODEL, THE CAR WE ALL KNOW WELL, IS THE MODEL-DE-LUXE, THE HANDSOMEST, MOST ENGLISH-LOOKING CAR ON THE MARKET TO-DAY. A CAR WITH ITS FIVE WIRE WHEELS, ITS LOW-SET TORPEDO BODY, WITH DEEP CUSHIONS, ITS SILKY SILENT MECHANISM, ITS EXPENSIVE EQUIPMENT, ALWAYS LOOKS AND ACTS EXACTLY WHAT IT IS—AN EXCLUSIVE CAR FOR PARTICULAR PEOPLE.

WARDEN ESTATE,
BY PUBLIC AUCTION, AT BISSET'S ROOMS, MILTON.
PORTIONS OF THE FAMOUS WARDEN ESTATE,

THE QUESTION OF MOTOR TYRE PRICES.
Why Imported Covers are Dearer.

Few motorists realise that the extra cost that is charged for imported tyres is attributable solely to the fact that heavy import duties—running into pounds—high freights, &c., have to be added to the selling price to you. When you purchase Australian-made you pay only for the highest quality rubber that is put into a tyre, the best cotton that the world can produce, and usually a one-ply heavier casing. The mode of manufacture embodies every up-to-date process incorporated in imported tyres. This you pay for, but you don't have to pay pounds extra for no return—money (your money) that simply goes to pay custom duties, &c. Few users of imported tyres have given thought to the fact that they pay an enhanced price for nothing.

We can assert with confidence that our present white tread "Dunlops"—in Grooved, Three Ribbed and Rubber Non-Skid—have no superior in the world for Quality, Wear and Reliability, and you can purchase same at a lower figure than imported tyres simply because you save pounds that the importer has to add to the price of his goods. Fit "Dunlops" and save money!

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

The New War Minister.—David (Lloyd George) and Goliath.—Restrictions on Sale of Liquors.—Coal Prices.

WESTMINSTER, July 15.

The succession of Mr. Lloyd George to the War Ministry has been greeted in France with an outburst of enthusiastic applause. The press recognise in the appointment fresh determination on the part of England vigorously to carry on the war to its inevitable end. As one leading Paris paper said, "the authority given to Mr. Lloyd George will be employed without weakness and without delay. All obstacles in his way will be broken down." Incidentally, the construction of the Ministry, of which his new departure is the prominent feature, supplies a striking example of the force of democracy. Here we have a Welsh country solicitor advanced to the position of head of the army, with a scion of one of the oldest and most powerful peerages in the United Kingdom in subordinate office under him. If 20 years ago the Earl of Derby, then Lord Stanley, one of the whips in a dominant Unionist Government that viewed the member for Carnarvon with personal dislike and patriotic suspicion, had in a nightmare dream seen a picture of himself at the War Office in the position of Under-Secretary, with Mr. Lloyd George as his chief, he would for a time have been excessively careful as to the condiments of his evening meal. Happily Lord Derby, in addition to being a man of patriotic purpose, is one of commonsense, absolutely free from personal vanity. It is safe to predict that the strangely-mated colleagues will get on wonderfully well together, a condition of affairs that will give the last touch of charm to the situation.

It was Mr. Chamberlain who, probably unconsciously, certainly undesignedly, was instrumental in providing the Cardiff solicitor with that turn in the tide of affairs which, promptly, courageously followed, led to fortune. With the towering figure of Gladstone laid low in Westminster Abbey, Mr. Chamberlain's supremacy as a debater was unquestioned in the House of Commons. Sir William Harcourt occasionally tried a bout with his former colleague (to the bitter end his personal friend), but did not do much damage. From the day the one-time rising hope of stern unbending Radicalism took his seat on the Treasury Bench, a Cabinet colleague of Lord Salisbury, Arthur Balfour, and others with whom in former days he strenuously fought, Mr. Lloyd George marked him for his own. When he first entered the lists lookers-on were irresistibly reminded of David stepping forth to encounter Goliath. Interest deepened and varied, estimation altered as time after time the encounter was renewed. Mr. Chamberlain, a born fighter, was not long in recognising that here was a foeman worthy of his steel. At the outset as scornfully supercilious as Goliath at first sight of David, he presently paid to his assailant a measure of personal attention that raised the member for Carnarvon to a premier place in the fighting forces of debate.

When, as a result of the general election of 1905, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was called upon to form a Ministry, Mr. Lloyd George's inclusion was inevitable. In accordance with long-established custom, a private member who had so far distinguished himself in Opposition as to establish a claim to a seat on the Treasury Bench would be favoured by an Under-Secretaryship, or at best, by appointment to the Financial Secretaryship, that jumping-off board from which a succession of men have reached the highest level of Cabinet rank. Mr. Gladstone, boldly but happily, broke the rule when at a bound he made Mr. Asquith Home Secretary with a seat in the Cabinet. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, not less accurately foresighted, forthwith made the member for Carnarvon a Cabinet Minister, head of the important department of the Board of Trade. For the rest of the story is it not written in the chronicles of a statesman who, having established popular favour and won personal renown in one post, when called to it in an hour of emergency has with equal success undertaken the duties of another?

Among businesses specially suffering from the war is that of the wine merchant. It is probable that influence of the example of his Majesty in abstaining from wine and other liquors during the continuance of the war has not been extensive. In the matter of hospitality, the custom of London has undergone a radical change. Time was, not later than two years back, when at this period, being the height of the normal season, dinner parties, luncheon parties, and suppers were incessant. To-day they are practically non-existent. Another function that helped to fill the coffers of the wine merchants were receptions after weddings. It was true the champagne liberally dispensed on these occasions was not the product of vintage years. Still, it cost money, and was good for trade. These festivities are now as extinct as the social gatherings or the dodo. Formerly the card of invitation gave particulars of the place and hour of the church ceremony, "and after" at the residence of the bride's parents, where hospitality was boundless. To-day the formula, after setting forth particulars of church and time, runs "all friends will be welcome at the church." I understand that a result of this change of fashion has been a decided falling-off in the attendance on the happy day of friends of bride and bridegroom.

Beyond this state of things the wine merchant is sorely hampered in the conduct of his business by arbitrary regulations imposed under the far-reaching Defence of the Realm Act. I do not know how it is outside the London area. Within that district no wine or spirits may be despatched to a customer unless it has previously been paid for. Wine merchants are not permitted even to accept payment before delivery through their carmen or messengers. Orders may be fulfilled only when accompanied by a remittance. Nor is this inscrutable edict the full measure of restriction. Mystery deepens when it is learned that wine and spirits may be despatched only between the hours of 12 noon and 2.30 p.m. and 6.30 p.m. and 8.30 p.m. On Saturdays, whilst wine may be sent out at these hours, no spirits may be called up from the vasty deep of the merchants' cellars. No one knows why, and the hardiest guesser has failed to hit on the reason for this distinction peculiar to one day of the week. But it is the law, and no one but Mr. Bumble would be so rude as to remark "The law is a hass."

The late chairman of the Gaslight and Coke Company, whose death evoked a notable expression of regret from a wide circle, was, ex-officio, profoundly interested in the high price of coal. He had devised a scheme for lessening the burden imposed upon other industries than that of the provision of gas for public and private use. According to him practically the whole of the industries of the country are exploited for the benefit of the traders in coal. The price of coal has been put up to a degree out of all proportion to the increase in the cost of working it, and so long as the demand is equal, or perhaps a little beyond, the supply, there are no means of controlling the price. Of the total quantity lifted about 20 per cent. is exported; and it is obvious that by adjusting the quantity sold abroad the high price at home can be maintained. Sir Corbet Woodall pointed out that there are two ways in which this may be dealt with. One, by re-imposing an export duty. The other, by recognising that coal is a national asset of vital importance to the nation, and establishing a standard price accompanied by a standard dividend to the owners, with variation upwards or downwards as the price of coal falls or rises. This would meet the legitimate demands of capital and labour in the coal industry, whilst it would deliver the public from the tyranny of arbitrary prices. The principle of a standard price ruling dividends by means of a sliding scale has operated with marked success in the case of the gas companies of the kingdom. Mr. Lloyd George, at the time Chancellor of the Exchequer, favourably regarded this proposal, but the outbreak of war shelved it, possibly not permanently.

AFTER THE WAR, WHAT?

(TRANSLATED FROM AN ARTICLE BY VALDES IN "EL IMPARCIAL," OF MADRID.)

France has had a cruel experience, but this experience has been her salvation. She was living in a state of material wellbeing hitherto unknown in history. Enjoyment was the goal she set before herself. A planned and intelligent sensuality was the rule in her towns, and was spreading throughout the country. When this happens, when we cater only for our bodies, the soul is offended and forsakes us.

Men are born for something more than to take off their hats to each other. This great catastrophe was necessary in order that the French should retrace their steps, and go in a different direction. When misfortune enters a home, brothers who lived apart, who scarcely saw each other, weep and embrace and renew the sweet intimacies of childhood. The feeling of fraternity had of late years greatly weakened in France, but now it flourishes again, and, like a flower, exhales sweet perfumes. And this deserves notice as one of the happiest results that this terrible flood will leave behind.

Another good thing to its credit will be the inculcation of an austerer mode of life, of which already there is clear evidence. The French were never dissipated, by which I mean that, though they led a life of pleasure, it was a life of ordered pleasure. At present they renounce all pleasures with admirable resolution. When peace comes we will see them displaying an eager activity to heal the wounds of the war, in order to recover their old prosperity, like ants working on an ant heap when it has been trodden down by man or beast.

Politics also will become healthier, a most necessary thing. Two years ago a woman, wife of a politician, relying on her husband's great positon, treacherously assassinated a well-known publicist, and after trial was acquitted by the jury. Every one in Europe possessing any moral sense exclaimed that the nation was decaying, nor was there any who failed to see that already the carcase was there, and the vultures were gathering over it. Only by scalpel and cautery could the cancer be removed, and the Germans were charged by Providence with the task. They were commissioned also to clear away the cataract from the blinded eyes of the partisans who ignore justice, and tolerance. "Why do the barbarians delay their coming?" said Ernest Hello once, as he saw the corruption of the Second Empire: "What is Attila doing?" And in truth in no long time Attila came; and he came not to punish wrongdoing only, but also falsehood. If the French Republic does not honour its motto, "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," for what purpose does it exist?

• • • • •

But in Germany there is much more for Divine Providence to do. For the great sin of the Germans is pride, and pride is mankind's greatest sin. It was on account of his arrogance that King Nebuchadnezzar came to eat grass like the ox; and do we not all fall on all fours like the beasts when the vapours of pride and vanity mount to our brain and make us giddy? From whence came this pride of the Germans? Its beginning is to be found in the excessive development of their industrialism. When men see themselves able to play and juggle with atoms, to transform gases into solids, and apply the forces of Nature to any use they please, they become puffed up with pride beyond all reason. The Germans had in this respect advanced beyond other countries. Exalted by their own achievements, they began to look with contempt on those who could not make bread out of wood, and they thought themselves the Chosen People of God. But God does not need bakers. When the magicians of Pharaoh turned the reeds into serpents, the serpent of Aaron swallowed the others. For many people retorts, stills, and inflammable gases and the like are the result and the end of all civilisation. Some tremble and are filled with fear at sight of the wonders which brute matter has been compelled by the Germans to perform. To these I would answer: Even if I saw them transforming a cathedral into a puff-paste pie, I would always admire more a dialogue of Plato or a play of Shakespeare. Germans were much more admirable when, in one of their small cities, in Weimar, there met together such men as Goethe, Schiller, Herder, Wieland, Kotzebue, inspired musicians, great painters, learned men, actors, than they are now with their cannon and Zeppelins. But it is not safe to say this to the ignorant crowd, who only kneel down before tangible works. As if the moral world did not come before the material, as if the unseen were not greater than the seen!

The Germans had attained an unheard-of degree of industrial and commercial prosperity, but I am not aware that on account of this there were in Germany more happy men than in any other country. Be that as it may, in the midst of their prosperity the flattering serpent whispered in their ears that they should eat the forbidden fruit; in other words, that they should humiliate their neighbours, and seize their wealth. They thought that the laws of nature were inviolable, and that the moral laws were not—a profound error. To-morrow they will find themselves cast out of their paradise—if it were a paradise—sad, ill-treated, bleeding. It is true they have done great harm to others; but can the recollection of this give happiness to any man? Let us hope that, after such a painful experience, they will again look for their heaven, not in Krupp's factory, but where they always had it—in moderation, in sobriety, in the quiet tranquil family life, in their libraries and concert halls.

And as regards England, what for her will be the consequences of the present war? I admire their literature, their politics, their customs, their games, their originality; and even their pride pleases me, for there is nothing aggressive in it; but, above all, I admire England because it is the land of free men. All the rest of us compared with them are slaves. How often when I saw the arbitrary injustice of the authorities in Spain, or heard tell of the insolence of the military caste in Germany, or of the intolerance of the French Jacobins, or the cruelty of the Russian police, I have said to myself: "Go on repressing, abusing, ill-treating; while England exists, liberty will not disappear from the world. In the last extremity we can go there to take refuge, we who are not born for slavery." Men blame the British pride. Nevertheless, wherever there is anything worthy of admiration, an Englishman will be found admiring it. His pride means confidence in himself, and does not inspire aversion, but rather respect.

When war broke out it was firmly believed in Europe that the immense and distant British dominions would rise to make themselves independent, and on this the Germans built all their hopes. Precisely the reverse has came to pass. The colonies felt the blow to the mother country like a wound in their own heart, and hastened with all their resources to her help. Hardly enough consideration has been bestowed on this fact, which is unique in the history of mankind. How just and fair-dealing must be the conduct which so attaches those under her rule that, given the opportunity, they do not seek to cut the ties that bind them. Grant that in past times there have been abuses of power, they were neither many nor serious compared with those of other nations; and what is the use of talking of what has been buried long ago? The history of the human race is the history of the wild beast. We must not count the bites we have given to each other. During the Boer war the British experienced painful losses. One of the Boer generals who did them most harm was De Wet. One day in a picture show suddenly appeared his portrait. Unanimous applause resounded throughout the hall, acclaiming the heroic enemy. Let us consider what would happen in any other country in Europe in such a case. Oh, great and noble people! Fear not for your immense power. Angels support with their wings the Powers that are just.

The more intimate acquaintance with the free countries, France and England, will make Russia more free. In this country we have the unheard-of case of a despot imposing liberty on his people. "You philosophers," said Catherine II. to Diderot, when he was vehemently urging reforms upon her, "you write on paper, which bears well enough the scratching of the pen; but we, kings, we write on the human skin, which is much more tender." The good Czar Nicholas II. has now the opportunity of proving the truth of his great grandmother's saying. In his vast empire there exists a powerful reactionary party, which shouts, as did our ruffians of last century, "Long live chains and slavery." In opposition to this party there is another which longs to do away with all traditions. With so many demons let loose it is not easy to come out of hell.

The obstacle with which Humanity is now confronted is the highest which it has ever faced in its long career. It has come to the jumping-off point. If it fails to take the spring we shall continue our course, but not ahead of the beast, rather side by side with him; and the law of the strongest will be in force, as it is still in force in the depths of the sea. The state of war will be perpetuated in our planet; hatred will establish its empire over the hearts of men; the wild beast will roar again through the cannon's mouth. But if once humanity passes the barrier, it will fall on the soft bosom of the Law of Christ, will acquire for ever consciousness of itself, and will continue gloriously its way towards the high destiny which Providence has reserved for it.

THE EDUCATION OF THE FUTURE.

(BY THE REV. C. J. PRESCOTT.)

There are many indications to-day that Great Britain is about to re-examine her systems of education. The war may not be over yet, but there are signs of its termination. They are right who say that if we failed to prepare for war in peace we ought not to fail to prepare for peace in war. This does not mean that the winning of the war, the winning of it soon, is not our first duty. It is the supreme need of the hour, and everything must pale before it. But our German antagonists give us boasting reminders that even in war they are making the fullest preparation for peace, and it behoves us not to lag behind. If the universities have lost for the time hundreds of their students, and if the schools have sent out headmasters and assistant masters in large numbers, there yet remain enough to discuss the question profitably.

In the article headed "War Time in London," published in the "Herald" last Saturday reference is made to a speech by Lord Haldane on the training of the nation, and we are told that his subject was the necessity for revision of our methods of education. We also hear that Mr. Asquith has appointed two committees, with Mr. J. J. Thomson and Mr. Stanley Leathes respectively as chairmen, to review the system of education as a whole. The duty of the former is to investigate the measures necessary to promote the study of natural science, that of the latter to advise as to the study of modern languages. The April number of the "National Review" contains an article on the "New Era in Education," by Mr. J. S. Norman, that deals largely with the work of the English Public schools. In answer to the question how they can come to the aid of the country in the present crisis, he says the headmasters must confer and co-operate with financial, commercial, scientific, and military experts as to the course to be adopted; and, secondly, that the headmasters will have to realise that the Public schools for all boys over 15 will become semi-technical institutions. Incidentally Mr. Norman bears fine testimony to the contribution made to the nation's fighting efficiency by these schools. "The system in vogue at the Public schools of delegating much authority to prefects, heads of houses, etc., had a remarkable effect on the ease with which young men were able to assume and exercise authority on those over whom they were put in command." That is what everyone who knew them expected, and it affords proof that some parts of a complete education have been gripped by them with sure firmness. At the same time, it does not follow that the system is perfect and does not admit of improvement and adaptation to the conditions of our new age.

As far as our State is concerned, we have been pluming ourselves upon a quite recent remodelling of education. One thing has resulted from which good results may be expected. Large numbers of boys and girls are now, by the expenditure of public money, enabled to remain at school for a longer period than formerly, and we have an increasing mass of material in our schools which, if properly trained, may contribute to the intellectual wealth of the land. That the new system in other respects is a great advance upon its predecessor is open to question. The modifications that have been made, and others that are demanded, testify to crudeness and haste, recognised from the first by some well qualified to form an opinion. Their opinion was either not asked or ignored. At the same time the fact remains that a reconstruction has been freshly made, and it might be supposed that no further alteration is needed now.

Nevertheless, the war has intervened since, and has brought with it a new body of problems. However excellent the recent arrangements were, it still remains true that they were made in the days of peace, and it is not merely wise, it is imperative, to ask whether the new conditions that will come into existence after the war do not demand a re-examination of the whole subject. No harm can come from the investigation, and it may well be that much good may result.

The question arises, what practical form should such an investigation take? And to that it is easy to give an answer. Some board or council should be immediately established to bring into conference our educational leaders and judicious men representing the professional, commercial, industrial, and military interests of the country. Perhaps not much can be done immediately. Certain facts loom large already, but we shall need a mass of information from the belligerent countries that can only be partially obtained at present. From Britain and France and Italy much could be obtained at once; when the time comes we may doubtless learn something from Germany. But if the facts on which a judgment must be based are only partially available now, it is of vital importance to begin to collect them. If only provisional conclusions can be formed it is worth while to form them, even though they need modification hereafter.

The important point is that the initial steps should be taken. Fortunately we have something to serve as a starting point. Shortly before the war the Teachers' Guild of New South Wales published a paper contributed by Rev. Dr. Radford, at that time warden of St. Paul's College, and now Bishop of Goulburn, in which he advocated an advisory council for secondary education. The outbreak of the war killed for the time being all discussion of educational questions, otherwise it is possible that some steps might have been taken to give effect to Dr. Radford's proposals. Now that these questions are coming up again for discussion, and coming with a new urgency, it is worth while to consider his suggestions. It is true that they were confined to secondary education, the subject at the time most under discussion. There is no need to limit it to that, though even now that is probably the sphere in which the greatest and most significant adaptations can be made.

The text of Dr. Radford's argument is contained in the terms of the resolution he proposed, which is as follows:—"That in view of the wide range of issues involved in secondary education, it is of urgent importance that a committee be constituted to consider the prospects and problems of secondary education in New South Wales, and to act as an advisory council to the Minister of Public Instruction, and that such committee consist of members representing the University, the Department of Public Instruction, the secondary schools outside the department, and the chief commercial and industrial interests of the State." The essential feature of the proposal is that of conference between three main groups: First the body of teachers with those who direct some or all of them, the actual dispensers and administrators of education; secondly, the University, the heart and centre (as it should be) of the intellectual life of the land, and, thirdly, the representatives of the great interests not directly connected with education. This last group has, perhaps, been too little heard, and in view of the war it is the group that is most entitled to be listened to now.

It is for the schools to say to these and others, "Tell us what you want, more especially after the stern lessons of the war. We exist to give the nation what it needs. When our boys and girls pass from us to you, what particularly do you want them to be able to do and what to know? We can do much to help you, and can do it all the better if we know your mind." Other interests must be consulted. What do the doctors want? What do the judges look for in men preparing to be barristers and solicitors? What do the dentists want? What do the heads of Churches want?

It is not contended that teachers are wholly dependent upon answers to these questions. It is their business to study the mind of the child, and to develop its powers, and about that they know, or ought to know, more than those who do not teach. Within certain limits they ought to, and do, speak with authority. But they can still retain that, while giving their instruction a turn or bias that would enable them to meet national needs in particular directions.

There is much to be said for Dr. Radford's proposals as they stand, even with their limitation for secondary education. But there is no need to limit them so, and their kernel might be found in another shell. But the least that might be done forthwith is for the Government to do as Mr. Asquith has done, appoint a committe or a Royal Commission to make inquiries and to present a report. Out of that might well grow some permanent standing body that could keep watch upon some of the vital interests of the State.

ROYAL ART SOCIETY.

37th ANNUAL SHOW.

Visitors to the private view this day, and to the public opening on Monday afternoon, will find the Royal Art Society's 37th annual exhibition in homely phrase "very much of a muchness" in its relation to recent shows that have preceded it. There are but few works of striking merit, but those few must be gratefully regarded. In the main, the artists repeat themselves a great deal. Necessarily so also do their critics. In illustration of this dictum, unavoidable complaint must be made of the very limited number of works of imagination. Perhaps the thoughtful visitor will be more impressed by that fact than by anything else. Is it not extraordinary that in these martial times, when patriotic ardour stirs the coldest heart, when also the painters themselves by generous contributions to Red Cross charities have ranged themselves with the humanely militant—is it not extraordinary that, except in the case of two of their leading men, the world-war should rage round their studios without disturbing the pastoral serenity of their annual show? Buttercups and daisies, dimpled streams and sapphire seas, still life, luxurious interiors, prosaic portraits, peaceful shipping! All these pass before the eye within the Education Department's noble galleries with an utter disregard of the absorbing theme that fills the mind of teeming thousands outside it!

All honour to those who have placed themselves in touch with the movement of the hour by the exercise of an artistic imagination. Mr. A. Dattilo-Rubbo claims first mention in this regard for his large canvas, "The Last Cartridge." This Italian painter has been at great trouble in securing minute descriptions of the Gallipoli coast and bush from returned Anzacs, and shows a rugged foreground near Cape Helles, of rock and herbage, faithful in the handling of detail, and bounded by a distant glimpse of the allied warships in action in the bay. Two young khaki soldiers are in the foreground. One of them has fallen, and the other, desperately wounded in the head, reaches out his hand for the last cartridge—game to the last. The dramatic feeling of the scene is admirably suggested. In less heroic vein, Mr. Dattilo Rubbo's "Sunshine After Storm" depicts a battered hero, his crutch on the grass by his side, happily reading the news in the restricted elbow room of some suburban yard. The homely scene gives pleasure in the sincerity of its treatment. The same cannot be said of "The Traitor," a red-nosed, middle-aged rascal of the lower orders, blindfolded and also bound by ropes in an out-house on mountain heights. There, in accordance with the rules of martial law in the Italian army, the wretched fellow will be left 24 hours without food or water before being executed by the guard.

It is not given to everyone to present scenes like "The Last Cartridge." Yet Mr. J. S. Watkins, always to the fore in imaginative works, by a happy turn of idea has changed a portrait subject into as effective a war picture as anyone could wish. The title, "A Memory of the Thirteenth," calls to mind the gallantry of a Gallipoli battalion. The actual "scene" consists of a youthful, newly-widowed bride with a countenance of great charm and refinement, who ponders sadly over an official message from the War Office which has reached her, together with the sword of the slain, the hilt of which leans against her knee. This is the most engaging picture this artist has ever painted. The technical treatment of the heavy fur-trimmed cloak of low-toned red, with the light glancing from its folds, is very effective.

Brief reference may now be made to the eight exhibits purchased for the National Art Gallery, none of which exceeds twenty guineas in catalogued value. James R. Jackson's "The Holiday" charms by its luscious colour arising from sunlight on blue water dappled by reflections from adjacent rocks, with figures and a boat to add interest to the scene. "Cootamundra Wattle" is vividly presented by A. E. Aldis. "The Sisters," a miniature by Gladys Laycock, is quite remarkable for the grace and balance of pose within a small space which distinguishes the grouping of the three girls. The water colours include D. G. Reid's "An Unfrequented By-way," a tender rustic scene almost English in the picturesqueness of its detail—an attractive little work. Charles E. S. Tindall's "Silvery Noontide, Circular Quay," shows an Orient liner at the mouth of the horseshoe Bay, and is perfectly drawn and coloured, although, as happens in various examples of this able artist's shipping, the treatment of the water itself is not as convincing. Maisie M. Edwards' "In Black and White" is a pastel-portrait noteworthy for its strength of colour, and for the life and character in the face of a dark-eyed woman capable of depth of expression. Two pencil drawings were also purchased. "Study of Kookaburra" is by James A. Crisp, who has deservedly made a name for such work. D. S. Cohen's "The Shade of a Hat" probably attracted attention for the impalpable quality of the shadow on the face. All these small acquisitions will occupy as much space on the National Gallery walls as a Corot or a Meissonier; and it will fall to a generation of the near future to decide what on earth to do with them when room has to be found for more valuable pictures.

The president, Mr. W. Lister Lister, by virtue of his office as one of the trustees, is debarred from inclusion in the above honour list, but he contributes some of the most beautiful landscapes in the collection. His masterpiece this year is the great canvas entitled "Summer." This splendid Australian forest scene is suffused with a mellow glow of warmth and light, that enchants the eye as it falls upon the blossoming gum trees, veritable giants of the forest, whose twisted branches with their lights and shadows are perfectly drawn. Mr. Lister's numerous contributions to the water-colour division are also a source of strength. "The Sunlit Haven, Terrigal," with its distant green coastline, threatening horizon, and the sparkling sea in peaceful ripples on a foreground of white sand, is in the artist's best manner; and he sends in various lovely glimpses of Palm Beach, near Barranjoey.

Mr. James R. Jackson excels both in figure and landscape, so that his group is unusually important. "The Dreamer," in which the gaze centres upon a girl in a boat, drawn up to a curving shore beneath the sun-filled foliage of a great tree, forms a captivating effort. The figure subject, "1871," is a real work of art in its quietly harmonious yet animated tones of colour. The portrait of Frances Gulliver, a little girl in brown velvet, with fine eyes, possesses a distinguished charm, partly due to the imitation of the style of the eighteenth century masters.

Mr. Norman Carter, apart from successful landscapes, is chiefly represented by portraiture, including a vivid likeness of G. W. Hadfield (hon. treasurer, R.A.S.), a strong and clever "Study in Black and Green," and the winning likeness illustrated in the catalogue. Mr. R. S. Wakelin's "Berry's Bay," and Gordon L. Trindall's "Meditation" treat the same kind of sun-filled subjects in different ways with acceptable results. Mr. John R. Eldershaw's "Flautist" is a technical achievement of merit, and his bird's-eye view of "Pasture Lands," with their rarified atmosphere, possesses style, though weakened by a fanciful sky deficient in values, and thus flat in effect. Mr. J. A. Bennett is represented by an attractive portrait admirably painted. Maisie Edwards' pastels are good. Mr. J. Muir Auld has gone to Nature for his "Heat Haze," an elusive effect successfully handled; and his thoughtful study of little "Thelma" is charming. Miniatures by Florence A. Fuller, Mrs. Eva Maclellan, J. S. Watkins, sculptures by J. A. Bennett, Betty Solomons, and G. W. Hadfield, are included with various paintings unreviewed through lack of space.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

CELEBRITIES OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

In "Great Victorians," Mr. T. H. S. Escott chats in an interesting fashion about many notable figures of the nineteenth century. In point of fact, the title is not quite accurate. Some of those mentioned in his pages belong more strictly to the pre-Victorian era, while others will be chiefly remembered for their achievements in the twentieth century. Still, for practical purposes, Mr. Escott's description is suitable enough, and he makes an admirable cicerone in his gallery of celebrities. One of the best chapters is that in which he traces the evolution of the British army from the Napoleonic wars to the present day. The British regular forces, if few in number, have always been an extremely formidable body; indeed, it is not many years since even the German experts grudgingly admitted that they were probably the most highly trained in the world, though their scantiness limited the scope of their usefulness. But the reasons of their superiority in 1815 and 1914 were widely different; not only their personnel but their whole principle of training had altered, and the change affected the higher ranks as much as the lower.

At Waterloo, and for long after, the British soldier was pre-eminently a fighter; he knew little and cared less about the science of war. There were exceptions of course, but the chief qualities demanded of a leader were courage, determination, and a capacity for taking risks. The ideal commanders were men like Raglan or Cardigan, fine figure-heads in times of peace and reckless in war. They would head a charge with the same insouciance with which they rode to hounds, and if they were careless of the lives of their subordinates, they showed an equal disregard for their own. This was all very well before weapons of precision were invented. In the days when wars were won by hand-to-hand bayonet work, followed by a shattering cavalry charge, personal courage was the principal essential in an officer's equipment. This worked well enough in the series of native wars in the first half of the century, but already, at the Crimea, it was seen that conditions had radically altered, and it was not long before the new school of scientific soldiering began to alarm those who still clung to the old order of things, and quoted the triumphs of the past in support of their obsolete theories. Three names will always be associated with the movement; those of Cardwell, who reorganised the service; of Sir Charles Trevelyan, who abolished the system of purchase in the army; and of Lord Wolseley, who translated their ideas into the practical lessons of tactics and training. In vain the conservatives opposed the reforms, and uttered Cassandra-like forebodings that the helmeted and goggled Prussian professor would supersede the athletic and sporting British officer. In vain their regrets that no more should they see the dashing commanders who had learned on the playing fields of Eton how to lead their men to victory. In vain the dark imaginings of the Service Clubs in Pall Mall and Piccadilly. The three worked on quietly, but indefatigably, and at last they had the satisfaction of beholding the nation accept as a matter of course a new regime, a democratised War Office and a transformed soldiery. Britain owes to them not only her efficient officers of recent times, but also her great leaders. Roberts, French, and Haig all graduated from this school; Kitchener, to a less extent. Certainly, Kitchener had infinitely greater affinities with the scientists than with the beaux sabreurs, but even so, Mr. Escott considers him an original product, and in this connection tells a new and apt anecdote. Fresh from his Egyptian exploits, Kitchener was asked by someone (it must surely have been a lady), "Pray, tell me who helped you to become a warrior of such renown?" "I can only say," was the reply, "with Topsy in Uncle Tom's Cabin, 'Specs I growed.'" There is more than a grain of truth in this, for Kitchener was more than a disciple of pure science in war; he was the first British Commander-in-chief to apply to its conduct the lessons of business and practical mechanics.

So much for the officers; with the rank and file the system has changed to no less a degree. A hundred years ago the private "was naturally and necessarily a blackguard. The greater his courage and efficiency, the greater his blackguardism. Therefore, in the interests of the army itself, and of the nation for which its victories were won, no serious attempt at improving the conditions, moral or material, of the rank and file could be made successfully, or need be made at all." Even 50 years later the severities of many a famous general, the brutalities, the conception of discipline which made a dirty button a flogging matter, were not deprecated by the general public, still less actively resented by the troops, who regarded all this as part of the curriculum necessary to harden them. This tradition has changed also; an enterprising soul came to the conclusion that it was not only possible but probable that you could get more out of a well-treated soldier than one who was badly treated; Wolseley and Roberts developed the theory until to-day you have the soldier who is sometimes insubordinate and grouses always, but never dreams of mutiny.

Mr. Escott's book is a store-house of new anecdotes. This is the more creditable because the people of whom he tells them have had their careers ransacked by biographers and historians innumerable. There is Beaconsfield's answer to the question whether he ever read novels: "Whenever I want to read a novel I write one." There is the Duke of Wellington's remark when he was greeted by the tenantry with the refrain: "God bless the Squire and all his rich relations, and keep us poor people in our proper stations." "By all means," grimly murmured the Duke as a chorus solo, "if it can be done." Incidentally one had always thought that this refrain had been composed by Sir W. S. Gilbert, and had been set to music by Sir Arthur Sullivan. It comes as a surprise to learn that it had an actual existence apart from the Savoy Theatre. There is the malapropism of a bluff and unlettered old country member when Robert Lowe, on his return from Sydney, made his first appearance in the House. Lowe was almost an albino. "Bless my soul," said the stalwart, "I wonder what we are coming to. We have just got what they call an Albanian. The next thing we shall have, I suppose, is a nigger with his banjo and bones." There is a prophetic utterance by Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, for many years the omnipotent British Ambassador at Constantinople. The mainspring of his policy was the preservation of the integrity of Turkey in Europe and antagonism to Russia. But he saw clearly enough that the situation might, and, indeed, probably would, alter. "During the first half of this century," he said, "Russia stood forth as the tyrant, not only of Turkey, Hungary, or Poland, but of national liberty wherever it could be found. Next century, when I am gone, you may see Russia herself making common cause with others against a neighbour denying to her and the rest of the world the right to breathe, save on conditions which that neighbour lays down." He spoke truly. Finally, one may quote a curiously ambiguous remark which von Moltke made to an American interviewer shortly after the Franco-Prussian war. The American had complimented him on the efficiency of the German soldiers. "I can accept," replied the Field Marshal, "your compliment on our troops in the hour of victory, but cannot answer for their deserving it in the day of defeat." Whether this meant, adds the author, that a serious German reverse was unthinkable, or that the German army might prove morally unequal to the strain of reverses and checks, was a point which, in the opinion of the interviewer, von Moltke purposely left doubtful. (Fisher Unwin.)

Sir Henry Lucy has a most catholic range of acquaintanceship; his friends number men of every creed, class, and political belief, of every degree of celebrity or of none at all. A long life spent in close association with Westminster and Fleet-street has provided him with a store of recollections which he has given to the world in the series called "Sixty Years in the Wilderness." "Nearing Jordan," the third and last volume of the series, is in no wise less interesting than its predecessors. Sir Henry Lucy has some claims to be regarded as a latter-day Pepys. He is not a historian, but his memoirs will be most useful to future historians. They abound in those personalia which no biographer can afford to ignore if he wishes to give a complete picture of his subject; they throw odd sidelights on all sorts of events of national and political importance; they are, in short, an epitome in small talk of English affairs for more than 60 years.

"Nearing Jordan" contains the agreeable discursive gossip which we always look for in Sir Henry Lucy's books. He discourses pleasantly on the visits he paid and the journeys he made and the people he met. Sometimes he adds a footnote to history. For example, it has often been said that the initial disasters in the South African war and its subsequent weary length were due to the fact that the Imperial Government was not aware of the difficulties that would be encountered. But the chief of the Intelligence Department assured the author that his branch of the service had never been deceived for a moment about the strength of the Boers or the nature of their equipment. It had known their resources almost to a man and a gun, but the powers that be had failed to take advantage of the information. In this connection a conversation between Lord Kitchener and Mr. Arnold Forster is quoted. The latter writes that "Lord Kitchener, like most soldiers, takes the lowest view of War Office organisation and spoke of the horror with which he first discovered the kind of machine he was expected to work with in South Africa." Kitchener, adds Sir Henry Lucy, followed Redvers Buller and Lord Roberts in command and benefited by their desperate efforts "to straighten out a tangle of mal-administration in Pall Mall that finds its only parallel in the Crimean war. If this cry of despair was wrung from him towards the close of the second year of the campaign, what must have been the position of his predecessors!" The author has another story of Kitchener which is so characteristic that it deserves to be quoted. The capture of Khartum in 1898 brought release to Charles Neufeld, who had been a prisoner for 12 years. The first English words he had heard since the beginning of his captivity were those of the Sirdar, who laconically remarked, "Well, are you all right?" This, Sir Henry Lucy observes, touches the sublimity of Stanley's famous greeting to the man he had gone out to seek and had found in the fastnesses of Equatorial Africa:—"Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" (Smith, Elder, and Co.)

THE EUROPEAN ANARCHY.

Mr. G. Lowes Dickenson belongs to that group of, shall one say, ultra-quixotic individuals whose desire to keep an open mind on the subject of the war seems rather to have blinded them to its essential issues. No one blames them for trying to be fair to Germany, but it is quite possible to give the devil his due without indulging in that habit of national self-depreciation, and that questioning of the motives of the Allies which are characteristic of the school of thought represented by the author. He would no doubt, disclaim any intention of seeking to palliate Germany's crime by the simple device of showing that none of his antagonists is, in the last resort, wholly free from blame, but that is precisely the impression left on the reader's mind by "The European Anarchy." He grants that Austria and Germany are immediately responsible for the war, but the war was an inevitable result of the "armed peace," in which Europe has lived since the beginning of the century. He most emphatically refuses to accept the theory, almost universally held in England, that Germany had for years past been pursuing a policy of war, while all the other Powers had been pursuing a policy of peace. He is convinced that the war finally provoked by Germany, was conceived as a "preventive" war, that is to say that Germany believed that if she did not fight then she would be compelled to fight later at a great disadvantage. He declares that practically all Germans are convinced that they are fighting in a just cause for bare existence, that they are resisting a deliberate conspiracy, headed by England and Russia, to destroy the rising power and wealth of a dangerous competitor. If the Allies succeed in imposing terms on Germany, which cripple her or seriously interfere with her development, her people will simply be confirmed in their opinion that they are the innocent victims of a grievous wrong, and that the forces of wickedness have triumphed temporarily. In such circumstances they will naturally cherish the idea of revenge, and instead of this war closing the chapter of international suspicion and violence, it will merely be the prelude to a new and more bitter one. Whether Mr. Dickenson means to do so or not, he contrives to convey the impression that a defeated and punished Germany will regard its plight much as we to-day regard the martyrdom of Belgium.

This is, of course, all very well. If the author's contentions were based on logic or fact nothing would remain to be said. But it is not difficult to find flaws in his argument. He appears to hold that Germany's belief that the war was "preventive" excuses her conduct to some extent. This is an extraordinary doctrine, particularly when the person who advocates it has pacificist leanings. Because A fears that some day B is going to attack him, is he entitled to stab B in the back on a dark night, facilitating this operation by murdering innocent C and D, who have ventured to suggest that his action is improper? Or, to take a more forcible example; if England ten years ago had sincerely believed that Germany would attack her in 1914, and had anticipated such a development by catching the German fleet off its guard, blowing it out of the water and invading Germany through Holland or Denmark, would Mr. Dickinson have permitted the sincere conviction that this was "preventive" war to stand as an excuse? What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and whatever may be said of such actions as the manifestation of a natural instinct for self-preservation, either is equally indefensible on ethical grounds. A more serious objection to his argument is that his major hypothesis is wrong. If we are to accept the admissions of her leaders, Germany does not, or at any rate did not, regard this war as one of self protection. Only the other day Prince von Bulow, in his latest book, explained how Germany sixteen years ago, during the South African war, played with the idea of declaring war on England, but decided that the moment was not auspicious. "By 1914," he continued, "we had grown so big that we could venture upon war with England in high spirits." This seems to dispose of Mr. Dickenson's amiable theories which have been founded on a belief in the sincerity of German protestations. He reckoned without the cynical frankness of von Bulow, whose confession must have disconcerted many people both in Germany and elsewhere. (Constable and Co.)

BACK TO THE LAND.

In a book with the prosaic title of "Our Food Supply" Mr. Christopher Turner discusses a subject which is likely to take an important place in Britain's post-bellum politics. Goldsmith has written a famous couplet describing the evil condition of a land "where wealth accumulates and men decay," and these lines might have served as the author's text. Though the cultivation of the soil may not bring riches as speedily as industrial pursuits, he believes that the health of the nation and of the individual alike in Britain depend upon the more systematic use of its agricultural resources. Years ago it was pointed out that as long as Britain fed herself from abroad her plight was precarious; should she lose command of the seas for a single month her empty mouths would cripple her. German strategists have been quick to realise this. Their programme always started with the assumption that their fleet would harass British commerce, interfere with the food supply, and bring Britain to her knees without the necessity of landing a single man on British soil. War, when it came, failed to produce this result; but Mr. Turner's opinion is that Britain has had a merciful escape. If Germany had really believed that England would go to war in 1915 "it is inconceivable that she would have allowed us to bottle up her navy as we have done. With all her cruisers—instead of only seven—on the high seas she could have caused severe damage to our shipping before our navy could prevent it. As things are, we may still have to suffer considerable inconvenience from interruption of our food supply."

Mr. Turner, therefore, argues that Britain should profit by the lesson of her narrow escape, and suggests the means by which agriculture in Britain can recover its former vigour. His disquisition is rather technical at times, but it comes down to two things. Much more can be got out of the land by scientific treatment, and given this scientific treatment many more people can gain a living from the land. He believes that an intelligent person, genuinely interested in his occupation, can soon learn enough to make a success out of farming, and he quotes the experience of Australia and New Zealand to show that with judicious aid and encouragement a mechanic or an artisan born and bred in urban surroundings can soon win to prosperous independence. The hundreds of thousands who return from the wars, physically hardened, accustomed to an open air life, and impatient of the dull drudgery of the shop or office, will supply the author with his ideal agricultural recruits. He wisely steers clear of the troubled waters surrounding the fiscal question, though he suggests that in the interests of Britain and the Empire it may be necessary to fix a minimum price for wheat. His chief concern is to provide a solution for problems which, already urgent, threaten to become more urgent in the future, and his book, though its literary importance is not great, contains much sound counsel. (Country Life Library.)

"IMPERISHABLE ANZACS."

Although much has been written about the men who stormed Gaba Tepe and the task they accomplished so gallantly, in "Imperishable Anzacs," Private H. W. Cavell not only has a story to tell that will bear infinite recapitulation, but he contrives to make us see the things seen by him from a new point of view. The author was a member of the first brigade to leave Australia and the first brigade to land at Gallipoli. It paid a terribly heavy toll both in officers and rank and file. The brigade headquarters was practically wiped out; battalion leaders were killed at the head of their men; corporals discovered themselves in command of companies, and the roll call at the end of the second day found the troops decimated but indomitable.

Private Cavell gives a vivid picture of the landing, and his final impressions of some of those who met their death there will have a historical as well as a personal value. But oddly enough the most interesting thing in the book has nothing to do with Gallipoli; it is an account of the fight between the Sydney and the Emden. In this the author dots the "i's" of the details of the engagement. Possibly all that he says has been said before, but his narrative, although second-hand, visualises that duel with the crash of the surf on the Cocos Islands in the offing more effectively than many a more pretentious version. Apart from the tale that Private Cavell has to relate, his book is valuable for its illustrations, which include photographs of many of those who died at the "Landing" and later. As a record, a tribute and a memorial, "Imperishable Anzacs" deserves to succeed. There is one inaccuracy which Private Cavell should correct in later editions; at the outbreak of war Mr. Cook, and not Mr. Fisher, as the author states, was the Prime Minister, and made the original offer of Australian troops. (William Brooks.)

THE SEA AFFAIR.

The "Navy League Annual" contains a great deal of interesting matter, though its scope is necessarily limited by circumstances. For instance, no fresh light is thrown on the naval operations of the past; various experts review them, and draw the appropriate moral, but their conclusions are based on material that is already familiar. At the most, things are hinted at which will not receive full explanation until the fog of war has cleared away. The usual sections dealing with the British fleet have been whittled down almost to nothingness. There are none of the photographs, lists, or tables with which we have been wont to flatter our patriotism and console ourselves. On the other hand, there are a series of chapters describing the work of the allied navies during the war, each written by an allied officer. Some of these are comparatively frank; others reticent to the extreme, but all leave the reader with the conviction that Britain is receiving the most loyal co-operation, and the most valuable assistance in her sovereign task of guarding the high and narrow seas, and of protecting all who go therein on their lawful occasions. Among the contributors to the Annual are such well-known authorities as Lord Sydenham, Mr. Archibald Hurd, and Mr. Gerard Fiennes. Each writes about the war from a different point of view, but all enforce the same argument, that Britain does not know, and probably will never know, the extent of its debt to its "strong buckler." (John Murray.)

NEW NOVELS.

"Winds of the World" is an excellent story by Mr. Talbot Mundy, whose tales about India are steadily adding to his reputation. The action begins shortly before the outbreak of the war; India is seething with rumours, and German spies are busy trying to sow disaffection. The native troops are the particular object of their intrigues; they cherish the amiable delusion that when Britain has her hands full, these can be induced to mutiny, and, indeed, are only waiting for the signal. Meanwhile an alleged cotton merchant has a peculiarly disappointing experience. He is told off to sound a hard bitten regiment of Sikh cavalry, and by a singular mischance has to deal with its Subadar. Ranjoor Singh would die rather than betray his salt; he knows his men and their whole-hearted loyalty to the British Raj. His first impulse is to dispose of the spy in good old forthright way. But there is a bigger game to play, and much against the grain he is induced to temporise and act a part in order that the discomfiture of the enemy may be the more complete. He has even to see his beloved regiment sail for France without him. The plot is worked out with great skill, and the author contrives to pile surprise on surprise. Much of the action takes place in the house of one Yasmini, a dancing girl of mysterious antecedents; it is to her activities that the title of the book refers, for in her salon, visited by men of every race and condition, is to be heard every breath of gossip and surmise blown from every corner of the earth as if by the winds of the whole world. Here, too, we observe from behind the scenes that strange organisation, the Indian Secret Service, a mechanism of wheels within wheels, a corps in which the agents do not know who their colleagues may be and trust no one at all. In "Kim" Mr. Kipling gave a passing glimpse of its inner workings; Mr. Mundy does the same, and whether or no his description is founded on fact it rings true enough. Its personnel furnishes the greatest surprise of all, and the admirable Babu has evidently studied the methods of Hurree Chunder Mukerjee with profit. This is a book which, once begun, one is reluctant to put down. Ranjoor Singh, the Subadar, is a splendid character, the type of a race that has deserved well of Britain and India, and that the British Empire delighteth to honour. He asked but one thing—to lead the wing of his regiment in a shattering charge against Britain's foes. He realised his ambition in the fields of France. He may have returned from that charge; he may have fallen in it; but in either case he was content. (Cassell and Co.; Dymock's.)

Although Richard Dehan was not at her happiest in the medium of short story—she preferred the broader canvas which a full-sized novel affords—there is much that is worth reading in "Earth to Earth." The author had a sneaking fondness for the sinners, the black sheep, and the derelicts of society. She was always eager to find some redeeming feature in their lives, and this is the keynote of many of the best stories. Thus in the one which gives its name to the book, "Tilly Tinkleton," a shameless hussy in the eyes of the respectable, rises to unexpected heights in her refusal to give up the titled wastrel who clings to her and leans on her even when he treats her worst. So, too, there is the M'Waugh, a figure who appears often in these pages. He is a drink-sodden painter, whose dour and rugged manner conceals a comprehensive tenderness for the feeble and lonely. He scandalises the unco guid and the socially ambitious with his sardonic humour and his ultra-Bohemian habits; but his quixotic and eccentric philanthropies make up for all his conventional shortcomings. MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Signor Tino Cappelli, who has been delighting Sydney audiences during the week in "Il Trovatore," is likely to be heard frequently during the Italian season, as his repertoire includes no fewer than 25 operas. Possessing a "lyric-dramatic" tenor—his own classification—he is equally at home in such roles as the one in which he opened, and in those of a lighter calibre such as Rodolfo ("Boheme"). The new artist was born at Florence, and studied singing under Vincenzo Vannini, a famous master, who also taught Carlo Dani. Signor Cappelli is well acquainted with that lyric tenor, who so charmed Australian audiences here in 1901, and says that he now lives in Florence, does not sing so much, and is the representative of the Gonzalez operatic firm. Consequently, when the Messrs. Gonzalez began to negotiate for Australia, they profited by Signor Dani's advice as to the engagement of the singers. Cappelli made his debut at the Teatro Verdi, Florence, as the Duke in Rigoletto nine years ago, and his success was so immediate that he at once secured a definite position, and appeared at the San Carlo (Naples), the Dal Verme (Milan), the Fenice (Venice), the Costanzi (Rome), the chief theatre at Palermo, and other leading opera houses. He has sung under the baton of some of Italy's greatest conductors, notably Luigi Mancinelli, so frequently at Covent Garden in past years, and Signor Sarafini, another celebrity. Signor Cappelli has also toured in France, Germany, and Poland.

In a discursive chat about the war and operatic affairs, the new tenor remarked:—"Naturally, a good deal of depression existed in Italy as soon as we came into the war, but there was a tremendous exodus to the United States, and some of the impressarios took their artists abroad. The Messrs. Gonzalez, for example, took a combination to Russia, and then toured India and the East, followed by Australasia, an enterprise of unusual magnitude. Another movement springing from the closer alliance between the two countries will involve an exchange of touring artists between France and Italy. This month the artists of the Paris Opera-Comique will play at the Teatro Lirico, Milan, and at the Costanzi, Rome, when Massenet's operas, 'Manon' and 'Sapho,' will be produced, and early next year an Italian company will visit Paris. Signor Lorenzo Sonsogno, of Milan, suggests that the two countries should unite to free their theatres from the predominance of Viennese operettas composed by Franz Lehar, Leo Fall, and other enemy subjects. His views, which are published in the 'Rivista Teatrale,' naturally carry weight. He thinks that Italy should secure a theatre in Paris for 'Addio Giovinezza,' and similar pieces, including Leoncavallo's 'La Candidata.' The war is restricting the output of new works, but I hear that Pasquale Amato has been writing from New York to some of the great composers urging them to prepare an opera with Dante as the central character. The famous baritone once sang a serenade composed by Gastaldon, which showed Dante on the bridge in Florence at a moment when he beholds the vision of Beatrice. It was then discovered that the artist's aquiline features wonderfully suggested extant portraits of Italy's master-poet, and he has ever since cherished the idea of himself in a Dante grand opera."

Mr. W. Arundel Orchard has resigned his long-held conductorship of the Royal Sydney Apollo Club, and on Monday evening the singers, through the medium of cordial speeches of regretful farewell by Mr. E. W. Salier (hon. secretary) and other members, placed on record their loyal appreciation of his distinguished and invaluable services during the past 14 years. In fact, that period in the history of the pre-war "Royal Sydney Liedertafel" has been fruitful in the production of fine music, which has temporarily lifted the male-voice choir above the partially disabling conditions of that form of entertainment. Mr. Orchard reinforced the club with 120 ladies' voices, and a large orchestra, for the performance of Granville Bantock's "Omar Khayyam," one of the most important of British works. In the same way the second and third acts of "Tannhauser" were rendered, with Rosina Buckman as principal soloist; Elgar's fine dramatic setting of Bret Harte's "Reveille" excited enthusiasm; and Hegar's choral ballad, "The Phantom Host." Stanford's "The Revenge," his own fine cantata "Ullah the Bowman," and many beautiful part-songs, have made the conductor's reign memorable. He has, however, a good many interests in hand as conductor of the Madrigal Society, lecturer on the History of Music and Musical Literature at the Conservatorium, where also he is conductor of the ensemble singing, and director of the choir at the Great Synagogue.

Mr. Orchard is by birth a Londoner, where his sister, Gertrude Orchard, is a well-known painter, who exhibits regularly at the Royal Academy and elsewhere in the United Kingdom, as well as at the Paris salons. Art runs in the family a good deal, and he has a musical brother, the Rev. Francis Graham Orchard, M.A., who is headmaster of Trinity College University School, Toronto. Orchard himself did not desert the muse in this way, but studied the piano and organ assiduously, and was organist at St. Jude's, Gray's Inn-road, London, and St. Paul's, Finchley. George Henschel, conductor of the London Symphony Orchestra, took a keen interest in the young musician, and admitted him to the rehearsals to study conducting. Thus equipped he became conductor of the Finchley Musical Society, and later of the Colet Orchestral Society, Hammersmith. This body of 60 players included many students of the R.A. and R.C.M. His academic attainments include the Mus. Bac. Durham, at which University he matriculated.

Amongst the items of news from London is a statement that Martin Harvey has formed a company, including our one-time visitors, Courtice Pounds and Edward Sass, for a film-production of "The Broken Melody." Herein the actor-manager will (pretend to) play the 'cello as the aged Polish refugee impersonated all over the world by the late A. Van Biene. Van Biene staged this drawing-room melodrama, which is written by J. T. Tanner, author of "The Dancing Mistress," at the Sydney Lyceum in 1905, with Marie Rignold as leading lady. The principal played the 'cello like an angel, but the piece was poor stuff, and did not run. Before arriving here Van Biene boasted 4000 appearances as Paul Borinski, and he must have added some 2000 more to his list before his death.

Miss Myrtle Meggy, a Sydney-born pianist, who has resided in London ever since her last tour of Australia with Madame Albani in 1907, has just given a recital at the Aeolian Hall. According to reviews quoted by Mr. Percy Meggy, of Moree, her concert appears to have been both artistically and financially successful. The programme consisted of a first-part devoted to the old classic masters, a second to Chopin, and a third to Russian composers, who have become very popular in London since the war. The press notices are highly favourable, both as to temperament and technique. It may be added that Miss Meggy has been organising concerts for patriotic purposes during the past two years, and has assisted at regimental concerts, at which she has been demonstratively applauded by her Anzac audiences.

The "Macbeth" film put up by Sir Herbert Tree at His Majesty's Theatre on June 22 only remained there a few nights. Prodigious preliminary puffs, however, involved the great actor-manager in the following ingenious deliverance:—"The coming of the cinematograph has given the actor immortality. The joy of picture-play work is that, if it be worthy, it is not just for the moment. In Art I am a socialist. My impulse is to give whatever I have of value to the multitude. And the greatest of all multitudes is posterity. The actor lived but for his generation. Now, by the cinema, his art is registered for all time."

The New York "Dramatic News" records the fact that "after a whole year's run in New York, Fred. Niblo wound up his season at 'Hit-the-Trail Holiday,' and will rest until his company goes to Boston in the fall."

Mrs. BERTHA BURNESS, 45 Spring-street, Waverley, was ill for over three months from insomnia, and weak nerves till Clements Tonic banished them. She is now well.—Advt.

IN THE GARDEN.

PERENNIAL PHLOX.

Last summer and autumn no dwarf herbaceous plants produced a greater profusion of bloom than the newer varieties of the perennial or herbaceous phlox. Where these were growing in masses they made a singularly beautiful display for many consecutive weeks and had few rivals in the beds and borders. They grow from 18 to 24 inches high, are easily cultivated plants, and produce immense clusters of large, variously and brilliantly coloured flowers. Those having pure white and bright crimson ones, and shades between these colours, are particularly attractive. The varieties of perennial phlox are very hardy, and can be cultivated with equal success in both the warmer and colder districts. It is the right time of the year to plant a general collection, and if vigorous, well-rooted plants are set out they will produce flowers later in the season. These plants thrive in a sunny and sheltered situation, in deeply worked friable rich loam, but do well and produce flowers freely in ordinary fertile soils. They can hardly be misplaced in the garden, but produce the most beautiful effect in bloom when growing in a bed by themselves, especially if their colours are arranged to harmonise. When grown in this way, or in small groups, strong plants should be set out 18 inches apart, and the crowns (undeveloped growths from the roots) left covered with about 2 inches of fine soil. As soon as the young plants have grown about 6 inches high mulch the ground surrounding them with waste from the cow yard or sheep pen, and in dry, hot weather give them liberal supplies of water at the roots, and occasionally hose them overhead. This will ensure a vigorous, healthy growth and an abundance of bloom later on. It will be an advantage to the plants if the weaker growths are cut out early in the season, for then the stronger ones will produce larger and finer flowers. In the colder districts the old perennial phlox root stocks, that have grown too large for their surroundings, should now be lifted and divided, and only the younger portions preserved for replanting in other positions. The following are some very fine varieties, suitable for present planting, with the colours of their flowers:—Asia, rosy lilac, shaded carmine, with pink centre; Brilliant, rich magenta; Delicata, pale pink with blood red centre; Etna, reddish salmon, with scarlet centre; Europe, pure white, bordered with crimson; Excelsior, bright rose; Iris, bluish violet; Pearl, pure white; Pink Perfection, pink with red centre; Superb, rich cerise with crimson centre; Tapis Blanc, large, pure white; Turquoise, rich violet, with dark crimson centre.

ANNUAL ASTERS.

Few annuals are attracting greater attention from cultivators than the different varieties of the annual or China aster. During the last few years larger areas have been devoted to their cultivation, and judging from inquiries that are now being made they will be a prominent feature in many old and new gardens this season. The giant-branching varieties are a great improvement upon the older types, and, moreover, are admirably adapted to Australian climatic conditions. They grow about two feet high, and produce a profusion of flower heads, each being from three to four inches or more in diameter, and showing a great diversity of colour. One of the newest varieties of this type is called "Maiden's Blush." It has beautiful double flower heads of a light salmon pink colour. In the more favoured districts it is the right time of the year to sow annual aster seeds, but in the colder parts early in October will be soon enough to sow them in the open. In a prepared seed-bed composed of sandy soil sow the seeds very thinly and evenly, and leave them only lightly covered with fine soil or leaf mould. The seed bed should be kept moist, but not wet, and the resulting seedlings must never be allowed to suffer from the want of water at the roots, or their growth will be stunted. As soon as the plants have developed five or seven leaves they will be ready for transplanting to the positions where they are to grow and produce flowers. Annual asters thrive in deeply worked, light, rich soils, in a sunny and sheltered situation, but they do well when grown in any friable, fertile loam. The plants make the most beautiful display in bloom when growing in a bed by themselves or in rows, either in single or mixed colours, but they produce a good effect when planted in small groups at intervals in the borders. When grown in masses this type of aster should be set out from 18 to 24 inches apart, and as the plants are surface rooters they will be greatly benefited when well established if the ground about them is well mulched with thoroughly decayed waste from the cow yard. In dry, hot weather the plants should receive copious supplies of water at the roots, and the foliage should be frequently hosed, to keep them in a healthy, vigorous growing condition. Hosing the leaves must, of course, be discontinued as soon as the flowers begin to expand.

NOTES.

Escallonia macrantha, an ornamental evergreen shrub indigenous to Chiloe, an island off the coast of South America, is now producing its bright red flowers in great profusion. This species of Escallonia grows about six feet high, and is well worth planting in a prominent position amongst shrubs of a similar height. It thrives in the more favoured districts on a variety of well-drained, friable, fertile soils. Well rooted plants may now be set out.

Roses are developing healthy growth, and there is every prospect of a fine display of flowers next month. Where the young growths are likely to be overcrowded carefully disbud the useless and weaker ones, particular attention being paid to those which are growing towards the centre of the bushes. These superfluous growths are easily and expeditiously removed by taking each one between the finger and thumb and giving it a gentle twist. Any suckers that spring from the root of budded or grafted roses must be promptly removed, but when doing this care must be taken not to disturb the root system.

A general collection of the newer varieties of canna may now be planted, and it is the right time to lift and divide the old stools, preserving only the younger and more vigorous portions for replanting. Cannas are gross-feeding plants, and must be grown in deeply worked, rich soil, to ensure the best results. These showy flowering plants produce the most gorgeous effect in bloom when growing in masses either in single or mixed colours. If cultivated in this way the taller varieties should be planted 4ft apart, and the more dwarf ones from 2 to 3 feet apart every way. Cannas can be successfully grown over a great part of the State, but in the colder districts their tuberous root stocks will require protecting from frost.

Gladiolus bulbs (corms) may now be planted in deeply worked, rather rich, sandy soil, or that which has been made fertile by the addition of thoroughly decayed natural manure. On no account use fresh waste from the stables, for that is detrimental to their growth. If extra long spikes of large flowers are desired, the plants must receive liberal treatment. Large bulbs should be planted at least 18 inches apart, and be left covered with soil to the depth of 2 or 3 inches; small bulbs will not require so much room, nor should they be planted so deeply in the ground.

In the warmer districts seeds of the following annuals and perennials may now be sown. Should a number of plants be required, the seeds are best sown in a prepared seed bed, but where there is only room for a limited number of seedlings the seeds are best sown in seed boxes:—African and French marigolds, balsam, begonia (hardy), coreopsis, convolvulus, cosmos, gaillardia, ipomoea, phlox (annual), portulaca (single and double), salpiglossis, salvia, scabious, sunflower (single and double), zinnia, etc.

FRUIT GARDEN.

Recently-planted deciduous fruit trees will be greatly benefited by mulching with some partially decayed vegetable matter the surface of the ground for a radius of about 3 feet from the stems. The mulch may be from 1 inch to 2 inches thick, but the stems of the trees must be left quite free. This will not only have the effect of preventing a too rapid evaporation of moisture from the soil, but will enable the young trees to withstand successfully the ensuing summer should it happen to be a hot and dry one. Orange and mandarin trees from which the crop has been gathered may now be pruned should they require that attention. Cut out the weaker of those growths that override and chafe each other, also the superfluous and useless shoots, especially those growing in the centre of the trees. Shorten these growths that are likely to prevent the formation of symmetrical heads. A skilfully-pruned tree will admit to all its branches light and air, which are so essential to its health and longevity. When the prunings have been gathered in heaps to burn, the land should be manured should it be lacking in fertility. Bush scrapings, where obtainable, provide a useful top-dressing when judiciously spread about the trees, but care must be taken not to place the material close to the trunks. Failing this, commercial fertilisers that contain a good percentage of potash and phosphates, may be applied; but they must be used with discretion and only on land that contains a fair percentage of humus. These manures should be evenly and thinly spread on the ground about the trees and lightly worked into the surface soil.

THE MAN FROM EGYPT.

BY HEADON HILL.

CHAPTER XXVI.—Continued.

Mr. Raven evidently did not emulate his late brother's asceticism. His gaze as he took the proffered hand of his hostess was one of frank admiration. His courtliness was that of a squire of dames to the manner born and improved by practice.

"My dear lady," he murmured, "if the cause of your coming to my rescue from the village inn were otherwise than what it is I should be deeply grateful for it. Poor old Claude. To think that he should wind up by winning for me such charming new friends."

"He spent so much of his time abroad that you cannot have seen much of him?" Miss Tenniers hazarded.

"Next to nothing," Mr. Richard Raven replied dryly, somehow conveying the impression that the little he had seen of the dead man more than satisfied the demands of fraternal affection.

A dainty supper had been prepared for the guest and he did full justice to it, explaining that in his swift rush from the north he had found scant opportunity for bite or sup. Mr. and Miss Tenniers ministered to his wants with assiduous attention, tactfully abstaining from allusions to the purport of the tired traveller's journey. They let him talk freely, as apparently he wanted to, about himself, gathering that he had a wife and five "dear little kiddies" in Yorkshire. By the time he had finished his meal Mr. Tenniers was stifling yawns, and hailed with alacrity the guest's expressed desire to be shown to his room. Mr. Tenniers performed that function himself and then returned to his sister in the drawing-room.

"What do you make of him?" she asked eagerly.

"A harmless egotist," was the reply. "His horizon is limited by the municipal boundaries of Leeds, and I should imagine that he benefits by his brother's death. At any rate, he is most successfully dissembling his grief. Smoking a cigarette in his bedroom just now, I gathered the impression that he regards all this as an excuse for an outing which he means thoroughly to enjoy."

"He didn't look at me quite like a married man," said Miss Tenniers, a little doubtfully.

The actor-manager's silver peal of laughter rang out. "Really, my dear Bertha, you are too funny. You of all people to be reeling off ingenue patter worthy of a suburban melodrama. Married man, indeed. You know as well as I do that they are the worst of the lot when they can find an excuse for a little jaunt away from home."

"You think he looks upon this as a jaunt?"

"I am certain of it. He strikes me as a needy man with a family, and with expectations from his bachelor brother. All plain sailing, Bertha. Be nice to him at breakfast in case I am not down myself. To-morrow night we ought to be out of the wood, if Macgregor can keep Timmins up to the mark. He has promised not to fail us."

CHAPTER XXVII. A HITCH ABOUT A COFFIN.

Miss Bertha Tenniers, as fresh and as alluring as one of her own roses, had to do the honours of the breakfast table alone, apologising for the chronic laziness which kept her brother in bed. But she made up for his absence by being as "nice" to Mr. Richard Raven as she knew how, and when she laid herself out to be nice to a man she was very nice indeed. Taking her cue from Albany's estimate of the guest's character, she studiously avoided the sympathetic note, holding the conversation to himself and his affairs rather than to the man he had come to bury. The Yorkshire solicitor responded to the treatment with clumsy provincial gallantries, which at length even Miss Tenniers found embarrassing.

It was not until the end of the meal that she ventured upon the question which overnight she had been instructed to put.

Mr. Raven replied rather irritably as though it switched him off from a pleasant to an unpleasant topic. "You won't be bored with a funeral, Miss Tenniers," he said. "We have a family burying-place in the north, where we have been—er—laid to rest for generations. I shall take poor old Claude up there as soon as I can get away. I shall make a push to get away to-night, but if I find that it is impossible may I inflict myself on you for another day?"

"Till next week, if you like," Miss Tenniers forced a simper.

"Ah, would that it could be so," Mr. Raven's voice grew tender. "But," he seemed to pull himself together with an effort, "I mustn't forget that this isn't exactly a pleasure trip. I have to go and see a man about the coffin. You will excuse me, I feel sure? I would much prefer to stay and wander about your lovely gardens."

Miss Tenniers rose from the table with a sigh of relief. How the strong, reserved man who lay dead at Laurel Cottage could have such a brother as this shallow-pated, vainglorious provincial attorney was a psychological problem which she could not solve.

"Don't let me keep you," she said. "You will be wanting to go into Basingstoke to see the undertakers. If so, I will order the car to be ready whenever you like, unless you prefer to arrange on the telephone for them to send a man out."

"But, my dear Miss Tenniers, thanking you all the same from the bottom of a grateful heart, I do not wish to go into Basingstoke or to communicate with superior and expensive people at Basingstoke," Mr. Raven replied. "Expense is an object with me, and my late brother set no store on pomp and show. Mr. Wyndham Trafford gave me the name of a man in the village who will meet my requirements at a more moderate cost. Timmins was the name, I think."

"Yes, Timmins is our local builder and undertaker," Miss Tenniers admitted. "His house fronts the green, close to the 'Trafford Arms.'"

"Then, with your permission, I will get along and interview Mr. Timmins at once. He will have to set to work promptly if I am to start for the north to-day."

Half an hour later Mr. Richard Raven presented himself at the workshop of the versatile Timmins, but it was locked up, and no sounds came from the interior. And at the dwelling-house next door a further set-back occurred. The frowsy woman who answered his knock received the inquiry with a vacant stare.

"Me 'usband's out on a job," she got her brain in motion at last. "He couldn't make no coffins to-day."

"I only want one, and if he is busy himself surely one of his men could carry out my order," persisted the would-be customer.

"We ain't got no men; 'e does all the work himself," said Mrs. Timmins with equal obstinacy.

"Well, where can I find your husband?" Mr. Raven's patience began to bend under the strain. "I can try to persuade him anyhow, and if he is a decent man he will lay his other work aside for a funeral order."

"Oo, aye; Bill is middlin' decent except Saturday nights. Mayhap he'll oblige ye. He's up at The Towers, tinkering on the greenhouse fireplace for the play-actin' swell that lives there."

Having thanked his tardy informant, Mr. Richard Raven retraced his steps towards The Towers. On his way, however, he stopped at Laurel Cottage. Yusuf answered the door, holding it open invitingly, but the visitor shook his head and handed the brown-skinned Egyptian a folded slip of paper, addressed to Wyndham Trafford, which he had pencilled on his way from the village. Yusuf accepted the missive and the two men parted with profound salutations. Naturally, a Leeds solicitor and an Egyptian orderly, who had no English, were not in a position to indulge in small talk. At least it would have considerably surprised a bystander if they had.

Though there were no actual bystanders there were two people not far away who would certainly have been puzzled had such a contretemps occurred. For on passing out into the road Mr. Richard came face to face with Albany Tenniers and an angular elderly lady in black. At sight of his guest the actor-manager with a flourish of his straw hat detached himself from his thin-lipped companion. The latter, who was Mrs. Mararion, with a frigid bow, walked majestically away towards the village.

"Well met, my dear fellow," said Mr. Tenniers, linking arms with the Yorkshire solicitor. "First because I am glad to see you; secondly because you have enabled me to shake off an intolerable bore. In the country one has to be polite to all sorts of queer people. You slept well, I trust? Everything going as smoothly as the melancholy circumstances will permit, eh?"

Mr. Richard Raven hastened to reassure his host. He had been made more than comfortable at The Towers, his only regret being that his sad errand must make his stay so short. "Though I am afraid," he added, "that I may have to trespass on your good nature for another night—unless I can prevail on Mr. Timmins to perform the miracle of working on two jobs at once. I was on my way back to The Towers to make the attempt."

And with crude provincial humour he described the failure of his call at the shop of the local jack-of-all-trades.

Mr. Tenniers was greatly concerned. "So Timmins is working for me, is he?" he exclaimed. "Come along at once, my dear chap, and we will root him out and start him home. It will only be some footling little job my head gardener will have set him to, and which can very well wait. I leave all such things to Macgregor. You must do your persuading yourself, however. As your host, anxious to detain a congenial guest, I refuse to be a party to anything that may hasten your departure."

PROBLEM OF EVIL.

Preaching in London recently, Canon Masterman said the question "From whence hath it tares?" went back to the earliest beginnings of human thought, and brought us face to face with the whole problem of the mystery of evil. There were three possible solutions. First, there was the theory that evil in the world had been entirely the outcome of human agency. This led ultimately to a conception of human depravity that made it difficult to see anything in man worthy of redemption. On the other hand, we might fall back on the blasphemous alternative of saying that God was the author of evil in the world. That way lay bewilderment of thought, yet often people had fallen back upon the idea that good and evil were alike divine in their origin. Of course, that led ultimately to an attitude of complete indifference as between the one and the other. The third alternative was, "An enemy hath done this." Ultimately evil went back to the spiritual world. The seed was sown by a malignant agency. All that man did was by weakness of body to give scope for that hostile agency. Jesus warned us against the danger of impatience. We are prone to attempt to stamp out evil by stamping out evil men. None of us was free from the tendency to wish that people who seemed to minister to the evil of the world should somehow be got rid of. It was a great temptation. Half the wars of history were the outcome of a conception of that kind. But good and evil were strangely mixed together in human life. Our powers of judgment and discernment were limited. God bore patiently with evil because He desired to gather into His garner every single fragment of good. He would not allow His purpose to be marred. Our duty was to be patient with evil men, but to fight ceaselessly against evil; never despondent because we knew the final victory was assured.

"GO TO CHURCH" SUNDAY.

Sunday, October 29, has been fixed as a special day on which Anglican men in the diocese of Melbourne will be expected to attend church service in their respective parishes, and also at St. Paul's Cathedral. This is part of the movement which is being organised to deepen the spirituality of Anglican church life. The need for a revival in the Church of England has received a good deal of publicity of late.

Bishop Newton, of Carpentaria, will arrive in Sydney on October 4, and return north on October 20.

Bishop Long, of Bathurst, will be the speaker at a series of men's services in the Adelaide Town Hall from September 18 to 22, in connection with the Adelaide General Mission.

Canon Burns, of the New South Wales Church Missionary Association, will leave on his way back to his station at Nairobi, in British East Africa, by the Karmala on Saturday week.

The Rev. E. N. Wilton, late Precentor at St. Andrew's Cathedral, will leave to-day for Bathurst, to be installed as Canon Residentiary and Sub-Dean of All Saints' Cathedral. He will, after a week in Bathurst, return to Sydney for a little while to carry out his part in the programme arranged in connection with the Anglican General Mission.

The Rev. J. Newton Stephen was inducted on Thursday night as rector of Holy Trinity Church, Erskineville.

The Dean of Newcastle (the Rev. H. K. Archdall) and the Rev. H. S. D. Portus, of the Newcastle Diocese, are to conduct missions in Adelaide during the last fortnight of this month.

The Rev. H. H. Robjohns, secretary of the Bible in State Schools League of New Zealand, is on a visit to Sydney.

The Rev. Seafield Deuchar and Mrs. Deuchar have returned to Victoria from England. During his three years' absence, Mr. Deuchar, in addition to obtaining his B.A. degree at Cambridge University, has been in charge of the Abbey Church in the parish of Christ Church, Cambridge. Mrs. Deuchar is a daughter of the Bishop of Bendigo.

The Rev. Arthur Reeves, of Jamberoo, has been appointed rector of Kiama, in succession to the Rev. H. A. Pearce.

The Rev. Josiah Tyssen, vicar of Maldon, Victoria, has been appointed to the parish of St. George's, Malvern, in succession to the Rev. C. Dalton, who has accepted an appointment in England.

The Roman Catholic Archbishop (Dr. Kelly) left Sydney on Wednesday evening on episcopal visitation in the South Coast district, and will return specially from Milton to be present at a meeting in the Town Hall, Sydney, on Monday. He will visit Moruya on September 16; Cobargo, September 17; Bega, September 24; Pambula, October 1; Bombala, October 8; and Nimitybelle, October 15.

Father J. Coady took up duty at St. John's Cathedral, West Maitland, on Saturday, in succession to Father M. Forde, the newly-appointed rector of Murrurundi.

ROYALTY AND ROSES

(BY T. S.)

Last English mail provided us with paper accounts of some leading horti summer shows held in various parts of land. Among others, the grand annual bition of the National Rose Society at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Regent's London, on June 20. Though the were fewer than usual, many notable ors at past exhibitions failing to compe function was a success. Roses constituted a leading feature of the tion.

Queen Alexandra visited the show, displaying the keenest interest in the generally, selected from one of the two baskets of magnificent roses.
chosen by her Majesty were the golden Margaret Dickson Hamil and the scarlet Donald McDonald. The referred to as "a rose for which no tion could convey an adequate idea of beauty." Donald McDonald is also a rose, and was in a gold medal group of roses at the Royal Horticultural ciety's show, held a few days later at Park, Kensington.

While it is always interesting to the doings of such a distinguished as Queen Alexandra, to us Australians real point of interest in her selection of particular roses lies in the fact were among the novelties sent from to our Sydney Botanic Gardens for the 1916. They were planted there in due and, under favourable auspices, should in October or November. Queen Alexandra is known to be a capital judge of best in roses, and the local development the named varieties will be watched interest.

TAX ON LETTERS AND PARC

It is stated at military headquarters considerable difficulty is being experienced obtaining sufficient supplies of water postage stamp paper. This difficulty is ing accentuated by the practice of a large number of users placing several of a low denomination on an article less number (in most cases one stamp) higher denomination would be sufficient.
With a view to checking this practice, proposed to make a regulation the Postal authorities to tax postal and telegrams on which more stamps necessary have been placed.

LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Griffith; Mr. Justice Barton, Mr. Justice Isaacs, Mr. Justice Duffy, and Mr. Justice Rich.)

COMPENSATION FOR RESUMED LAND.
NEW TRIAL GRANTED.

The Court, in a reserved judgment, unanimously allowed the appeal of the Minister for Works from so much of an order of the Supreme Court of March 23 as dismissed an application for a new trial made by the appellant, the New South Wales Aerated Water and Confectionery Co., Ltd., of Newcastle, being the respondents. A new trial was accordingly ordered.

The original action was one brought by the company for compensation for land resumed by the Minister under the Public Works Act of 1910, and it was heard in October last at the Newcastle Circuit Court. The jury returned a verdict for £3130. Appellant then applied to the State Full Court for a new trial, but the application was dismissed, excepting as to a special valuation of machinery, which reduced the verdict to £2830.

The case then came before the High Court on appeal by the Minister, the main point to be decided being whether, where a property under lease was resumed, the jury in assessing the compensation to be paid for the resumed property should consider the probability of renewal of lease, no renewal being provided for in the lease.

The Court decided that costs of the first trial were to be costs of the cause, and that costs of the new trial motion and appeal to the High Court were to be paid by the respondents.

CLAIM ON WHEAT CONTRACT.
APPEAL DISMISSED.

Reserved judgment was delivered in the appeal by Albert Edward Delaney, of Messrs. Delaney and Co., of Melbourne, against the decision of the State Full Court, in the suit brought by the Great Western Milling Company, Ltd., against Delaney, for the recovery of £150, alleged to have been due as moneys paid by the company to Delaney, under a contract of May 16, 1914, and repayable to the company by virtue of the Wheat Acquisition Act of 1914. The contract was between the defendant and Pyke Bros., of Coolamon, for the sale by Pyke Bros. of 6000 sacks of wheat. On October 12, 1914, Delaney and Co. purported to assign and transfer their rights in the contract to the Great Western Milling Co., and the company paid £150 to Delaney. The case had previously been before Mr. Justice Pring, and he found in favour of the defendant. The matter was then referred to the Supreme Court on appeal, the Court reversing the decision, holding that the company should receive the full amount claimed. That was the decision appealed against.

The Court, by a majority, the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Barton dissenting, dismissed the appeal, with costs.

Mr. Innes, K.C., and Mr. Pickburn, instructed by Messrs. Perkins, Stevenson, and Co., appeared for the appellant; and Mr. Ralston, K.C., and Mr. Curlewis, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, for the respondent company.

(Before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Griffith; Mr. Justice Barton, Mr. Justice Isaacs, and Mr. Justice Rich.)

JUDGE'S DECREE UPHELD.

The Court unanimously dismissed, with costs, the appeal by Etela Joseph Redman against so much of a decree of Mr. Justice Harvey on December 15 last as referred to the disposition of portion of the estate of the late William Redman. The respondents were the Permanent Trustee Company and Alice Redman, for whom Mr. Knox, K.C., Mr. Leverrier, K.C., and Mr. Maughan, instructed by Mr. S. M. Stephens, appeared; Isabella Hage, for whom Mr. J. A. Browne and Mr. Hughes, instructed by Messrs. Hughes and Hughes, appeared; and Sydney Charles Fraser, John James, John Francis Wynne, Thomas Henry Furnival Griffin, and Arthur Wigram Allen, who were unrepresented. Mr. Flannery, instructed by Messrs. Murphy and Maloney, appeared for the appellant, on his own behalf, and as administrator of the estate of the late Bernadetta Johnstone.

(Before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Griffith, Mr. Justice Isaacs, and Mr. Justice Duffy.)

LEAVE TO APPEAL GRANTED.

Mr. Windeyer, instructed by Messrs. C. A. Coghlan and Co., applied, on behalf of William John Blackmore, for special leave to appeal against the decision of the State Full Court, which had set aside a verdict for £250 damages, which had been awarded him in a suit brought by him against the Gas Employees' Union owing to his dismissal by the Australian Gaslight Company, Ltd., owing, it was alleged, to the instigation of the union, as he refused to join that organisation.

The leave asked for was granted.

On the affidavit of Mr. G. W. Richardson his Honor recommended the nomination of J. Christey, of Wheatley and Wilson streets, Newtown, as employers' representative on the Miscellaneous Group, No. 6 Board. The appointment was made to fill the vacancy caused by J. M'Elhone's resignation.

VARIATION OF CONSTITUTION.

H. Sullivan appeared in support of the application, Mr. J. B. Moffatt for the Australian Workers' Union, Mr. Michael Burke for the United Labourers' Protective Society, and Mr. Bretnall for the Commissioners for Railways and Tramways. After hearing evidence his Honor delivered partial judgment. He said he would grant the application as far as gangers were concerned, and would recommend the constitution of a separate board under the Labourers' Group. This would involve a consequential variation of the constitution of the Labourers' Group, No. 1 Board, by excluding gangers. As to paymasters, timekeepers, storekeepers, and other workers, his Honor took evidence, but said he was not sure as to whether they were under the Act. He accordingly reserved his decision.

DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Judge Murray.)

STREET KERBING AND GUTTERING.

New North Sydney I. and T. Company v Willoughby Council.

A case more in the nature of an appeal than an action was decided by his Honor in a reserved judgment. The matter in dispute was the refusal of the Willoughby Municipal Council to take over a certain road in a subdivision of the Northbridge Estate, beyond the Suspension Bridge. The owners of the estate, the New North Sydney Investment and Tramway Company thereupon appealed to the Court against the council's decision. The appellant company had submitted to the respondent council for approval a plan and specification of the proposed road, which was intended to be used as a public thoroughfare. The council refused to take over the road, contending that it should first be kerbed and guttered by the company.

His Honor said that the Court determined that the plan and specification shall be taken as approved, subject to the conditions of the letter of July 26 last, addressed to the council's solicitors, and put in evidence. This letter excepts therefrom the requirements of the council that the road be kerbed and guttered. The Court also determined that it must be taken that the condition for ballasting be understood to include a substantial provision for the holding up and retaining in position of the ballast on its outer edges by firmly set stones, well bedded in the ground, and not rising above the surface of the blinding or the formation of the road beyond the blinding.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Sly and jury.)

Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE.

George Herbert Woods, 31, a cabman, pleaded not guilty to having, at Sydney, on July 22, feloniously slain William Bayfield. Mr. W. Clegg appeared for the defence.

The case for the Crown was that Woods was driving his cab at a rapid pace down Oxford-street, city, when he knocked down Bayfield, who died as the result of the injuries he received.

Woods, in his defence, said that he was driving his cab at no more than six miles an hour, when Bayfield stepped in its way, and fell on the back of his head.

The jury acquitted Woods, and he was discharged.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

There is still a fair amount of activity in the real estate market, and the volume of business transacted this week is quite up to the standard for the past month. The indoor sales were all well attended, and a number of properties changed hands.

On Thursday the auction rooms of Messrs. Raine and Horne were crowded. The attendance included many connected with the theatrical profession, which was an indication that something in the way of show houses was under the hammer. It was the well-known Wonderland City, with a frontage to Fletcher-street, Bondi, containing 16¼ acres, and adjoining the tram line to Bondi Beach, that was under offer. There was a fair amount of bidding; but finally the property was passed in at £4700. As this offer is close up to the reserve it is possible that business will follow. At the same sale, for a block of land with an old building standing on it, adjoining the King's Cross Theatre, at the top of William-street, Darlinghurst, £2000 was refused. As it is only the land that is of value, and the frontage is 30 feet, the offer works out at £66 per foot. The reserve is above that amount. Mr. Rabett, however, sold an investment property in Bourke-street, Surry Hills, for £875, and, subject to approval, he disposed of three cottages at Bondi Junction for £2425.

The sale at the rooms of Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co., on Thursday, was well attended. Mr. Carpenter sold a cottage at Chatswood for £500, and another in the same suburb for £825. He also had biddings up to £900 for a block of land fronting New South Head-road, Vaucluse. This works out at £11 per foot. During the week Mr. Carpenter disposed of 67 acres at Belmore, on the Bankstown line. The land is in one of the best parts of Belmore, and will soon be placed on the market by means of a subdivision sale.

The weekly sale of Messrs. Richardson and Wrench yesterday was well attended, and a number of properties were sold. A corner shop and dwelling, in Union-street, Erskineville, was sold for £600. The house, Glenbrook, Union-street, Erskineville, was knocked down for £410. The cottage, Kismet, at Thomas-street, Lewisham, realised £765, and the adjoining cottage £720. For the residence Woodlands, and 4¼ acres of land, at Killara, £4200 was refused; but it was announced that the owner would take £5000. For factory premises at Leichhardt £925 was declined.

During the week this firm disposed of two cottages in Grose-street, Leura, one at £1200, and the other at £600; also a block of land, fronting Sydney-road, Manly, for £200; an allotment, Blaxland-road, Eastwood, at £3/5/ per foot, and a block in the Fitzpatrick Estate, Gladesville, at 24/ per foot.

Messrs. Stanton and Son included in their sales for the week a block of land in the Quiriang Estate, Woollahra, with a frontage to Trelawney-street, at £20 per foot.

Batt, Rodd, and Purves, Ltd., have recently disposed of quite a number of properties, while negotiations are proceeding for the completion of the sale of others. A terrace of six cottages, Zamia-street, Redfern, was sold for £1025, and a terrace of 10 cottages (leasehold) in Marriott-street, Redfern, brought £2250. At Randwick a cottage in Darley-street was sold for £850, and a cottage in Dixon-street, Waverley, brought £650. A large residence in Henrietta-street, Waverley, known as "Woodlawn," changed hands at a reasonable figure; while a freehold property used as a woolscouring establishment at Botany also changed hands this week. The price ran into five figures.

During the month of August the business transacted by Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co. exceeded that of August, 1915, by over 150 per cent., and that of August, 1914, by 120 per cent. The fact that all the sales effected during the past month were purely of the "bread and butter" description, and that there was not a single exceptional contract made to swell the total, is regarded by the firm as undoubted evidence of the soundness of the market. The only outstanding feature of the business of the past week was the extraordinary number of sales at Bankstown, where the demand is said to be growing stronger every day. Toongabbie farmlets also came in for a great deal of attention from buyers.

Mackay's Estate, at Belmore, comprising 67¼ acres, was sold this week for £9415, which is at the rate of £140 per acre. It is for subdivision purposes. Mr. M. Mulcahy was the selling agent.

During the week Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co. sold by private contract a small investment property in Riley-street, comprising two houses, for £880, also a small investment property in Palmer-street, city, for £660, and a block of land at Dolls Point for £200.

Messrs. Slade and Brown this week disposed of a leasehold residence fronting Wellington-street, Woollahra, for £1250; a terrace, Robert-street, Newtown, for £1400; a cottage residence, Broughton-road, Artarmon, for £1025; two pairs cottages, Gore Hill, for £2600; residence, Green's-road, Moore Park, £750; a block of land, Merryvale Estate, Pymble, £980; and a residence, Phillip-street, Newtown, £400.

SUBDIVISION SALES.

With the approach of spring, every preparation is being made by the salesmen for Saturday afternoon auctions during the summer months. Some choice subdivisions will come under the hammer this season, and a number of good sales will no doubt be recorded. The first of the spring subdivision sales will take place this afternoon, when two auctions will be held. One is at Darling Point, where Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will offer seven excellent building sites, admirably suited for homes or residential flats. The land has frontages to Yarananbee-road and Hampden-avenue.

The second sale this afternoon will take place at Maroubra, when the balance of the Loch Maree and other estates will come under the hammer. Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co., Ltd., will conduct this sale. These allotments are but a minute from the tram, on the east side, and surrounded with all the conveniences of home life, schools, churches, shops, and amusements. The land is also handy to the beach. There are 24 lots, and these will be offered on easy terms.

The second meeting of a New South Wales Women's "Battleplane" Committee was held at 24 Moore-street on Wednesday afternoon. Lady Gould was in the chair, and there were present: Lady Ewing, Mrs. Warry, Mrs. C. Ross, Mrs. Vincent Dowling, Mrs. Jopp, Mrs. Worrall, Miss Edith Hill, Mrs. Hemsley, Mrs. N. Pilcher, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Joske, Mrs. F. Wilkinson, Miss Atkinson, and the hon. secretaries. About £500 has already been subscribed, and there have been many applications, both from town and country, for the collecting books. It is hoped the money may be subscribed within the month. The committee wish it widely known that it is a shilling collection. If about 44,000 women gave one shilling, added to the £500 already subscribed, it would pay for the aeroplane. Collecting books are to be obtained from the hon. secretaries—Mrs. H. Merewether, Tarpeian, Potts Point; and Mrs. Tom Watson, Cadaxton, Double Bay. Mrs. T. H. Kelly held a drawing-room meeting at The Rift, Bowral, on Thursday, and has arranged for an entertainment.

The Sydney Lyceum Club held its annual general meeting on Wednesday. The reports of the workroom and the club were read and adopted. Some suggestions for further extending the club's activities were unanimously accepted. A vote of thanks was tendered to Miss Valentine, who resigns from the club, for the punctuality and method with which she has for two years discharged her duties as chairwoman. The following committee was elected:—Miss E. Allan, Miss Amy Bonn, Miss Theo. Cowan, Mrs. Glasson, Mrs. Gourlay, Miss Esther Kahn, Miss Anette Maclellan, Miss B. Perratt-Hill, Miss Isabelle Ramsay, Mrs Frederick Roper, Mrs. Turner Robinson, Mrs. Rose-Soley.

A juvenile ball was held in the Oddfellows' Hall, Woollahra, by the children of the associated schools of St. Francis', Paddington, on Thursday. There were about 200 children and 100 onlookers present. The costumes were all that could be desired, and the judges (Miss Chisholm and Mrs. Margets) found no easy task in selecting the best. Master T. Moran (Chidley) and Miss T. Phillips (Lady Mary Carlyle) were selected, and beautiful prizes selected. The hall was decorated, and the arrangements, under the organisation of Miss Amy Smith, were pronounced a success. Amongst those present were—Misses M. Gale (Fairy), C. Evesson (Fairy), M. Lambert (Fairy), B. Lambert (Fairy), L. Kerrigan (Blue Bell), P. Hill (Queen), M. Doyle (Belgium), W. Hickey (Australia), L. Herbert (Starlight), D. Braning (Japanese), R. Ryan (Emerald), P. The work done at the Red Cross Sewing Guild at the Town Hall this week has been very good indeed. The khaki quilts, with their large red crosses, take a long time to make, but look very effective when finished. It is hoped that all helpers will come in next week, as there are two large orders to be completed.

On the 9th inst a wedding was celebrated at the Alstonville Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Gordon W. McAlpine between Herbert R. Bulwinkel, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Bulwinkel, of Neben, Alstonville, and Anne Pearl Robins, daughter of Mr. H. A. Robins and the late Mrs. Robins, of Lochiel, Rous. The families of the bride and bridegroom are old-established and highly-respected and the wedding caused local interest. Mr. and Mrs. Bulwinkel motored to Tenterfield, en route to Sydney and the Blue Mountains, where the honeymoon was spent. Their future home will be Alstonville.

At St. John's Church of England, Balmain, on July 29, the marriage of William Ernest, third son of Mr. John Carson, of Granton, Ontario, Canada, and Effie, third daughter of Mrs. E. Martin and the late Mr. George Martin, of Martindale, Young, was solemnised by Rev. G. F. B. Manning. The bride, who was given away by her cousin, Mr. A. E. Sinfield, wore a gown of ivory crepe-de-Chine, with satin and pearl trimmings and true lovers knots. The court train was arranged with a large sequin medallion. She also wore a wreath and veil and a pearl drop pendant, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas, camellias, and asparagus fern. Miss Beatrice Sinfield and Miss Lyla Johnson, cousins of the bride, as bridesmaids, wore frocks of white silk crystalline trimmed with shadow lace. They also wore mob caps, and carried posies of pink sweet peas and asparagus fern. Bangle and diamond and pearl drop pendant were the bridegroom's gifts. Mr. Harry Martin, a brother of the bride, acted as best man. The bride's present to the bridegroom was a gold albert, with greenstone pendant attached. A reception was held in the Temperance Hall, Balmain. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Carson left for the South Coast, the bride wearing a navy blue coat and skirt, with hat to match. Prior to her marriage, the bride was presented with some table silver by the teachers of the Holy Trinity Sunday School, Grenfell, where she had been a teacher for several years.

'A' HOME THAT COSTS NOTHING

IS

'A' FARMLET HOME,

BECAUSE

IT PAYS FOR ITSELF.

Let us give you an illustration. A man bought a block of land from us for £160, paying £5 deposit and 30/ monthly. When he had paid it off it was worth £300, and with this security he financed his home. By cultivating his soil and keeping poultry he can more than meet his instalments and interest on the mortgage. Therefore, without touching his regular earnings he is making the home support itself. When the mortgage is wiped off it will support him too.

'ANYONE CAN DO THE SAME.

who possesses anything from £1 to pay the deposit, and who has sufficient thrift and enterprise.

So send for our Illustrated Booklet on "The Farmlet Life," giving full directions from data supplied by leading experts, showing how to make big profits from small Farms. Also apply for plans and particulars of:—

TOONGABBIE PARK.
Our Magnificent FARMLET LANDS in the Glorious WENTWORTVILLE DISTRICT, where Ideal Blocks can now be secured from 1 acre to 4½ acres for £45/10/ per acre.

DOROTHY MOUNT.

FLUSHCOMBE FARMLETS.
Another fine area suited to Market Gardening and Poultry Farming at Blacktown; 2-acre Blocks, only £20/10/ per acre.

BANKSTOWN POULTRY FARMS.
There are several admirable estates at Bankstown for Poultry Farming, and to our already well-known properties we have just added the SUBURBAN PARK ESTATE, situated in the vicinity of our famous Bankstown Farmlets and the SYDNEY PARK ESTATE, along Chappell-road and the George's River-road. Quarter-acre Blocks from £10/10/ each.

BUNGARRIBEE FARMS.
At Blacktown, very nicely situated, and possessing good soil, with permanent water. Splendid Blocks, from 11¼ to 21 acres, at £15/10/ an acre.

WAMBERAL.
There is only one Farm left on our Rich Soil Estate, 8½ miles from Gosford. An attractive Property, 22 acres, for £182 the lot. Rainfall, 52 inches.

BABY ACRES.

WYEE FARMS.
One Farm only remains of these, and it consists of rich alluvial land, on the Wyee Creek, only 2½ miles from the Railway Station, 70 miles from Sydney. Ample water supply, and good timber. Rainfall 54 inches. Area, 40 acres 3r. 20p., at £4/10/ per acre.

OUR REPRESENTATIVES WILL BY ARRANGEMENT DRIVE INTENDING BUYERS OVER ANY OF THE ABOVE PROPERTIES.

All on our EASY TERMS SYSTEM—£1 deposit and 10/ monthly for every £25 purchase value.

HABERFIELD GARDEN SUBURB.
OUR SPECIAL LIST OF ATTRACTIVE PROPERTIES.

With the advent of Spring the beauty of Haberfield is enhanced. Picturesque at all times, it is rarely seen more to advantage than when its thousand gardens are flowering forth in fragrance and colour—it is then a Garden Suburb more really than in words.

It is now universally known how, under the modern system of Town Planning, Haberfield has combined the best features of Suburban development with modern style in architecture.

WE PARTICULARLY DRAW ATTENTION TO THE NEW AND ATTRACTIVE COTTAGES WE NOW HAVE READY FOR SALE, AND INVITE YOUR INSPECTION OF THEM THIS AFTERNOON.

They are situate in all parts of the Suburb, close to tram or convenient to train. Each embodies artistic interior treatment, with a construction equal to any Property you wish to compare.
As one example we will briefly illustrate one House at PRICE, £965.
Located in a convenient street, it stands on a fine block of land. A wide hall gives entrance to drawing, dining, and bedrooms. There are breakfast-room, kitchen, and all usual domestic offices. Wide verandahs, etc.—the whole property being most complete.

A HABERFIELD RESIDENCE
MAY BE PURCHASED
ON £50 DEPOSIT.

INTEREST ONLY 5 P.C.

We shall be only too pleased to discuss Haberfield with you at any time, or to forward you our handsomely Illustrated Booklet.

HOUSES AND LAND FOR SALE.

SOME OF THE

PRETTIEST VILLA SITES

in Sydney are in

HABERFIELD.

If you alight from the tram at Dalhousie-street you will, after a pleasant walk past many beautiful garden homes, arrive at that part of Haberfield which occupies the whole of the waterfront of Long Cove, a magnificent inlet of the Parramatta River, whose winding waters provide glorious views.

Adjoining the large park reserve near the water's edge are some really high-class Allotments for £3/14/ per foot, about one-third the price of less attractive sites in the same district.

On the lower levels and facing the great marine drive, 200ft wide, now being constructed by the Ashfield Council, are a number of good Blocks, 50ft x 150ft, for only 25/6 per foot. When the parade is completed this land will be easily worth four or five times the value.

Our Special Representative will be on the Ground this Afternoon, and will show you around. He will carry a red flag for identification.

On the Western side of Long Cove, which is technically Five Dock, but actually part of the Haberfield District, is our splendid which is close to the Abbotsford Tram line, and consists of really excellent Home Sites, the higher ones of which look over the sweeping and graceful waters of the cove, embracing a panorama of great beauty.

These Blocks are 50ft x 150ft, and are available at from 42/6 per foot—a remarkably low price for such good class Land.

The Domremy Ladies' College adjoins the estate, and the magnificent foliage on these grounds bears the strongest testimony to the excellence of the soil. Nearer the waterfront is our on which there is a wide choice of Home Sites, from 50 x 123 ft, from 40/ per foot. Many of these Blocks are splendidly elevated, and others front the western side of the proposed Dobroyd Parade.

We can recommend the above Sites with every confidence. They are all easy of access, close to a good shopping district, schools, churches, etc., while the district is unquestionably destined to be one of Sydney's finest suburbs, thereby affording every prospect of big increases in values. Terms: £1 Deposit and 10/ monthly for each £25 purchase value.

Our well known Slogan,

"WATCH KENSINGTON GROW,"

has become a household word in Sydney, and as in the case of nearly all our big subdivisions, the Kensington Estate has surprised everybody in the remarkable rapidity with which it has developed into an up-to-date suburb.

Kensington is within the 2d tram section, and is one of the most accessible suburbs, as the journey from the centre of the city only takes about 20 minutes.

THE KENSINGTON ESTATE, though mostly sold out, still offers some excellent openings, both to the home-seeker and the investor.

There are very fine building lots now to be obtained, 50 feet x 140 feet, from £4 per foot, at which price the investor is certain to realise a big increase in the course of a very short period.
SPECIAL TERMS: 5 per cent. deposit, balance in equal monthly payments over a period of six years, and 5 per cent. interest.

HOMESEEKERS AND RENTPAYERS.
We will Build a COTTAGE on your vacant land in any suburb 15 per cent. cheaper than anywhere else in Sydney. A Cottage of 2 nice rooms and wide verandah, with brick chimney and stove, would cost you from £100, according to the finish required and the position of the land. Larger Cottages just as cheap; and if you own the land, or even if the land is only partly paid for, we can build WITHOUT DEPOSIT IN ANY SUBURB according to the amount paid on the land. Or if you have from £20 in cash, we will buy the land in any suburb you prefer and build a Cottage to your own design according to the value of your deposit. The repayments are very easy, being from 5s 4d per week, according to the cost of your cottage and every penny you pay is benefiting yourself instead of the landlord. There are no expenses of any kind, and the repayments do not commence until the Cottage is completed. We have arranged our system with a special provision for sickness and misfortune, thus assuring every man an opportunity of OWNING HIS OWN HOME. You will not go far wrong if you call and see us first, and it costs you nothing. Plans, estimates, and all particulars are free.

THE WHISTLING EAGLE.

(BY W. M. SHERRIE.)

When in the early morning the valley and mountain woods find delightful voice through the medium of the native songsters of the bush, and the joyous chorus which heralds the return of a new day finds clamant expression in the most varied of minor and major keys, there is always one note which has a dominating distinction of its own, and which may be heard clear above every call and cry and carol of the feathered families, not even excepting the matchless song of the magpie. There is probably no part of Australia in which this arresting note is heard to greater advantage than along the beautiful valleys of the Murray River, and more particularly the regions nearest its source. The note of the whistling eagle (Haliastur sphenurus) is so pleasant and so melodious that the presence of the birds is always welcome to the lover of nature who has anything of an ear for the unstudied, spontaneous music of the bush, but among the communities of the wild it is something which connotes warning and danger. Among humans one "may smile and smile, and be a villain," as Shakespeare has it; and among the bird tribes it has come to be recognised that the whistling eagle may whistle and whistle in the most joyous strain—and at the same time be keenly on the alert for an opportunity to commit ruthless murder.

As a general thing the wild hunter proceeds about its serious business in grim silence. The whistling eagle is an exception to this almost invariable rule. The bird may be gliding gracefully through the air, and whistling with as much spirit and abandon as if that were its sole mission in life, and all the time it is scanning the land, the bush, and the air with unerring eye in search of something to kill and tear to pieces. On a bright morning, when all the woods are sparkling with moisture touched by the rays of the rising sun, and the peaks of distant mountains and ranges are beginning to show through the dissolving blue and grey and purple mists, it might seem to the human onlooker that the whistling eagle, sailing majestically above the river trees to a running accompaniment of exquisite music, is simply inspired by the happy conditions in which he finds himself—but the other birds know better. They know that the vocal effort of this pirate of the air is largely in the nature of a song of thanksgiving—for the opportunity to be principal actor in the tragedy which is to provide him with a meal or food for his mate or his young.

For the most part these noisy birds haunt the river valleys and the swamp areas of the country. They are rarely found at any great distance from water. When nesting they usually build in high trees which are entirely surrounded by water. The object apparently is to enhance the safety of their nests from attacks by enemies. For several seasons in succession a pair of these fine birds nested in a tall gum tree growing on a small island in the centre of the river not far from Jingellic. Every morning during the breeding season the shrill, far-carrying note of this pair would be heard resounding throughout that part of the river valley; but later, when the eggs were laid and the hen commenced brooding, the male bird alone would be seen patrolling backwards and forwards over the tops of the trees, but always within easy distance of the nest.

One morning, shortly after dawn, the eagle travelled much higher than usual, and had settled on the limb of a tree standing out from the shoulder of a high range. While he was there, evidently intent upon watching for an opportunity to swoop upon one of the young rock wallabies which were fairly numerous in the locality, something attracted his attention in the direction of the nest. With a powerful, shrill cry, followed by a rapid succession of crescendo notes, the bird flew off towards the tree where his mate was brooding, but kept so high that to the onlooker it seemed as if he intended flying over the nest at a height of hundreds of feet. At the same level, but travelling with the swiftness of an aeroplane, and giving voice to an almost continuous succession of notes which were one-half song and one-half menacing scream, he came within a hundred yards of the nest. Then, like a flash, he turned over, and began to shoot straight down towards the water with such dazzling speed that the swish of his body through the air could be heard a quarter of a mile away.

Just as he began his descent an ibis which had been sitting on a projecting dry limb of the tree on the island took wing in the hurried and precipitate manner which betokens terror, and made a wild dash downwards towards the reed-covered fringe of the water. But he was too late. When they get balanced and fairly going the ibis family are very swift birds on the wing, but the one which had blundered unsuspectingly into this danger zone never had a chance of eluding the "bolt from the blue" which descended upon him like a flash of light. While the ibis was still twenty or thirty feet above the water the eagle struck him, head on in the side of the body—and then shot up in the air with the speed of an arrow, while the ibis, limp as a bundle of rags, rolled over and over and tumbled helplessly into the water within a few feet of the bank. Almost at once the ibis was picked up but was found to be absolutely dead. The ibis is a large and a fairly powerful bird, yet he was killed by the violent impact of the eagle as surely as if he had received a bullet through the heart. As a general thing the whistling eagle does not attack such birds as the ibis, but in this case it would appear that the luckless bird was treated as an invader of the area which eagles regarded as exclusive to themselves and in which no trespass would be tolerated.

THE WOOL TRADE.

OPENING MELBOURNE SALES.

The first sales of the new season were held in Melbourne on Tuesday, when catalogues totalling some 7000 bales were submitted by the several selling brokers. Never has a better or more representative selection been submitted so early in the season, and consequently unusual interest was attached to the sale. Early shorn New South Wales wools were much in evidence, these, for the most part, being drawn from Riverina, the Murrumbidgee, and Bogan districts, which, together with several well-known Queensland clips, formed an attractive display. The general character of the new clip created a favourable impression, being well grown, sound, and of fair quality, although, as might be expected, it carries a good deal of burr.

The best wools, both merinos and prime crossbreds, which were well grown and free, were in strong request, and the high level of values established for them in June last, when the previous sale was held in Melbourne, was maintained. The "Argus" says that competition from Yorkshire, France, and Russia was exceptionally keen. Medium to inferior merinos, particularly burry descriptions, showed a good deal of irregularity, with a tendency towards lower prices. Good-length, burry pieces, on the other hand, thanks to strong Italian support, sold remarkably well. With the exception of the finest counts, such as 58's and 56's, which, as indicated, commanded full late rates, crossbreds generally were in buyers' favour.

A record for Riverina greasy merino was established by the Austin ewer Midgeon, which sold to 23d. Other notable sales in the grease included the WGB (Western Australia) up to /22¾, whilst Aramac and Corinda, both from Central Queensland, each made up to /21¾. Indeed, the competition for these two clips together with the all-round average made for them, was a feature of the sale. Meloel also sold up to /21¼.

THE APPROACHING SALES.

Selling conditions in the Sydney market during the coming season will be similar to those of last year. Supplies will be brought forward gradually. This will mean an extension of the sales well into the New Year, notwithstanding the small clip available. There is every indication that freight will be even more difficult to secure than last year, and this will in itself limit the offerings, as buyers will contract only for such purchases as they are able to ship. Should the embargo on exports to neutral countries be continued, our principal customers should be Great Britain, Japan, Italy, and France, and there is every reason to believe that competition will be sufficiently keen to at least maintain values at last season's levels.

The new clip has been coming into Sydney warehouses in greater volume during the past week, and if arrivals keep up there should be a fair quantity available for the sales which open in Sydney next Monday week.

The bulk of the wool from the north-western districts shows evidence of the drought, and for the most part is short in length, although burr is not so much in evidence as it was last year. So far only small parcels have been received from the southern and western districts, but these compare favourably with last season's clip.

During the coming week the Brisbane September series of sales will be held, and it is anticipated that the combined offerings will total about 30,000 bales.

A rumour has been current for some time past that the shipping companies have under consideration the question of materially advancing the freight of bales of scoured wool weighing under 250lb. The Sydney Wool Selling Brokers' Association has taken the matter up, and it is proposed to make a strong protest against what is regarded as "most exorbitant charges."

PRICES CURRENT.

During the week there has been a fair amount of business passing in fellmongered wools at satisfactory rates. One or two parcels of oddments also changed hands.

CARBONISING WOOL.

The question of disposing of the short, faulty wools suitable for carbonising is evidently occupying the attention of the Federal authorities. The "Argus" says that the Comptroller-General of Customs is seeking information as to the quantity of such wools likely to be handled in Melbourne during the coming season. According to the Sydney "Wool and Stock Journal," the associated selling brokers of Sydney put the total down at 108,000 bales for Sydney, which is far in excess of the quantity that Melbourne brokers will be called upon to dispose of. The western, north-eastern, and Gippsland districts of Victoria are practically free from burr, consequently it is to the Riverina of New South Wales and Northern Victorian districts that carbonising sorts must be looked for. Just why the information is sought is not quite clear, but it will probably be found that it is in connection with modifying the existing embargo on shipments to neutrals. Latest mail advices are to the effect that carbonising plants have been largely increased throughout the West Riding of Yorkshire, which should afford some relief to the congestion and accumulation that have taken place in these wools since the outbreak of war. The question of establishing further plants throughout the Commonwealth has from time to time occupied the attention of private enterprise, but the difficulty, not to say impossibility, of obtaining machinery from manufacturers at the other end of the world always stands in the way.

THE NEW ZEALAND CLIP.

Reports from Wellington, New Zealand, state that the weather has been very boisterous, with heavy rain in most parts of the country. The rain should do a great deal of good, especially in the localities where drought conditions were experienced last summer. As far as can be ascertained, the flocks are doing well, and lambing is commencing. The wool outlook is uncertain as the trade is obsessed with the idea that the coming clip will be commandeered by the Government, although the Prime Minister recently stated that he had not received any communication from the Imperial Government on the subject. The sheep returns of New Zealand have not yet been completed. An interim return was issued some time ago, in which a shortage in the flocks was exhibited, but now the Government Statistician is confident that the complete returns will put a different complexion on the matter, and that there will be no shortage. Interest at present centres in the crutching sales, and this class of wool is selling well. A special crutching sale was to be held in Wellington.

AUSTRALASIAN WOOL VALUES.

The following table shows the quantity and value of wool sold in Australia and New Zealand during the season 1915-16:—

Markets.	Bales.	Value.

The gross revenue exceeded that realised in the Australian and New Zealand markets in the 1914-15 season by ten millions sterling.

BARMEDMAN SHOW.

BARMEDMAN.—The Barmedman A. and H. Association held their annual show on Wednesday. The weather was fine, but recent rains and the heavy state of the roads had an effect on the attendance. The opening ceremony was performed by Mr. H. C. Hoyle, Minister for Railways, who was accompanied by Mrs. Hoyle and Messrs. T. Brown and F. J. Page, Ms.L.A. The number and quality of the exhibits were excellent, all sections being well represented. Awards:—

Mr. Wyndham (Conductor) reports that the weather conditions generally during the month were mild. Rain fell on five days, and there were a few light frosts. There were no fatalities.

AVERAGES.

	Month of August. 1915.	Month of August. 1916.	Period April to August. 1915.	Period April to August. 1916.
Second year hens	110.7	113.7	271.7	312.2
First year hens	125.0	—	382.5	—
Single pens	127.9	—	431.6	—
Section "A"	—	127.0	—	495.5
Section "B"	—	125.2	—	502.5

The above figures show a slight reduction in the average for the month in sections "A" and "B" (which is more marked in the heavy breeds section), as against the figures for the first year and single pens in 1915. However, the increase over last year's figures during the five months is highly satisfactory.

TAXING WEALTH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As the Prime Minister has now taken up the cry of some of his supporters and says "There must be equality of sacrifice—since we are calling our men to sacrifice their lives, we shall not hesitate to compel men to sacrifice their wealth," let us see what there is in it. There is no question of compelling men other than those of military age to risk their lives. It has never been proposed to require men above that age, who have no wealth to sacrifice or risk anything whatever. Then why should those only who have some be required to sacrifice it? And as probably at least three-quarters of the private wealth in Australia is owned by men above the military age, Mr. Hughes's argument has no bottom.

For the men of military age who possess some wealth, surely even Mr. Hughes would hardly propose that they should be required to make both sacrifices, risk their lives at the war and surrender their wealth too, and in dealing with those above the military age, to be consistent in his claim for "equality of sacrifice," if he proposes to take the wealth of those who have any he should also take the services of those who have none, i.e., compel them to give their labour to the nation for nothing, or at most for a bare living (what would Mr. Hughes and his supporters say to that?), and let him show his sincerity by beginning at the top.

As a matter of fact, the men of means who pay land and income taxes are already finding most of the money required to pay the interest on the war loans, besides giving a large part of their labour gratis, in making up the endless returns required; and as in war munitions and equipment are just as indispensable as men the nation would not be able to wage war at all or defend itself in any way without those who have saved money.

I am, etc.,
G. H. HEBDEN.
Sept. 1.

SPECIAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE OSCILLATING PORTAL WALL BED

is more valuable because of its Building function than merely as a piece of Furniture. It is A CONSTRUCTION SAVER, A SPACE SAVER, A LABOUR SAVER; and last, but not least, prevents a Drain on the Family Purse.

These are the reasons why it is MAKING OVER AGAIN the whole idea of what a Modern House must be.

In large homes the OSCILLATING WALL BEDS are used on verandahs for in-and-out-door sleeping, in children's rooms, and to provide extra accommodation that will not be a makeshift.

THE OSCILLATING PORTAL WALL BED should not be confused with the old-style folding bed; no part of our bed folds except the head and foot rail. The Bed and Bedding are just like any high-grade bed. It has all the luxurious qualities of the best bed you ever slept upon.

Our 50-page Booklet shows how our Bed has been used by others. Perhaps your ideas may be somewhat different.

OUR TECHNICAL SERVICE IS MAINTAINED in order to give each owner of a house, apartment, or hotel full advice and specifications of how to use the Bed most efficiently in your particular case.

When our beds are not used, and in a horizontal position, the bedding is EXPOSED TO THE LIGHT, AIR, AND SUNSHINE, and can be dusted underneath without the slightest effort. How often does the ordinary bed get dusted underneath?

New problems are solved every day. You are welcome to present yours for immediate and efficient solution, free of charge.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1916.

MR. HUGHES'S STATEMENT.

It was inevitable that during some part of the statement delivered by him yesterday morning Mr. Hughes should speak as if he were on his defence. He could not have failed to be conscious of the disappointment which followed the announcement of his proposals on Wednesday or of the extent to which that disappointment was personal to himself. His speeches, both in England and Australia, had seemed to guarantee a power of leadership which would extinguish all but the faintest opposition in Parliament, and ensure legislation immediately on the lines desired by Mr. Hughes's audiences and by an enormous majority of the people. The proposals announced on Wednesday and elaborated yesterday were a proof that these expectations had not been fulfilled. Put beside the perfervid denunciations of a whole series of speeches, they seemed colourless and half-hearted. Unless so much and such constant eloquence had been misinterpreted, they showed that the Prime Minister had been compelled to accept a compromise in order to carry through a substantial portion of his own wishes. Mr. Hughes's speech was an admission of the refusal of a considerable section of his followers in Parliament to trust him as he would be trusted by the Opposition or by the people as a whole. We saw again the difficulty in which a Government is placed when its majority is too large to feel the need for discipline or when there is no machinery by which the whole Parliament may be sent back to the electors. To have to make the admission contained in this statement and in his proposals must have disappointed the Prime Minister far more than his hearers or his readers. His speeches in Great Britain have been explained by him as part of an effort to bring all classes in the nation together, and those delivered in the State capitals may be justified as part of his effort to induce all parties both in Parliament and out of it to see the national duty with the same eyes as himself. But undoubtedly they created expectations both as to Mr. Hughes's own power and as to the temper of the majority which the event has not justified. It was the main object of the statement delivered yesterday to show that there is no ground for disappointment if we keep our attention fixed not on expectations or perorations but on the real needs and resources of the country. In that object he appears to us to have succeeded admirably. The thorough-going compulsionist may regret that the haphazard selection made under the voluntary system will be continued for another month. But if we assume with the Prime Minister that compulsion should not be introduced until the voluntary system has failed, then it is clear that nothing has been lost in any way comparable to the advantage of national unity. The figures given show that enough men are now available to fill any gaps in the troops at the front up to and including the month of January and to provide for the new division already guaranteed. At the end of this month sufficient recruits will go into camp to keep up the reinforcements at the rate agreed upon. Each of these recruits will have his three months' training, and will be ready to take his place in the firing line if and when he is needed. Mr. Hughes mentioned the limits put upon the despatch of troops by the scarcity of ships. Unless some new arrangements were made by the British Government it would be impossible for the Commonwealth to send away more men than those included in the Government scheme. This statement seems to us to answer the more thorough-going orators who demand a wider conscription and a great increase in the number of our troops. To these arguments there is, however, another answer suggested at the opening of Mr. Hughes's speech. The number of troops to be sent is regulated by the request of the Imperial authorities. After consultation with the Prime Minister they can appreciate the needs of this country, and they know the particular duty assigned to our soldiers in France. The limits, as well as the imperative nature of our obligation, are implied from their request, and it seems to us that they have both been kept in mind by the Government in framing the scheme now disclosed.

Interjections in the course of Mr. Hughes's statement caused him to allude to two difficulties which occurred to some of the disappointed advocates of compulsion. He was asked what would happen if the people answered no, or if the majority in the Senate refused to assent to the bill which would be necessary to give an affirmative decision the force of law. We believe that Mr. Hughes is right in neglecting both these suggestions. Statesmen are entitled to neglect a possible legal consequence which could not become a fact without a complete change in the nature of their countrymen or a new kind of perversity in their representatives. Members of Parliament may be reluctant to go before the electors, who, at best, can only send them back after an expensive and exhausting contest. They are never likely to neglect the verdict of the people expressed on an issue which has excited more attention than any other in our history. Of that verdict there can not be the shadow of doubt. The Government proposals will have the support of the Prime Minister, of a number of his colleagues, and of the whole Opposition. But their most valuable support will come from beyond the ranks of politicians. The issue clearly appeals to the instinct which is the foundation of our social ideals, which forbids one man to accept the sacrifice of another without making his own sacrifice in return. It was this instinct in the nation which inspired us to provide our own army and navy. In the individual it has sent many a man to the front, although the military life is repugnant to all his ideals. In the referendum the Australian people will obey the sense of justice which they have striven to express in much of their legislation. But they will also be conscious that the unanimity of their decision will of itself be worth many regiments to the Allies. Nothing can be better calculated to bring about the surrender of our enemies than an assurance that even in the most remote corner of the Empire the people are still prepared to make new sacrifices for victory. We may be sure at this stage that they are looking with the utmost anxiety for any sign of weakness or of too confident relaxation. Mr. Hughes will not be disappointed in his appeal from Parliament to the people. Every Australian would have preferred that Parliament should have expressed this unity itself. The difficulties of a widespread political debate and the attendant expense are obvious, and should have been avoided by men more closely in touch with popular feeling. But since a number of them have failed it will be for the people to give the Prime Minister the authority he needs, and to show the enemy that there will be no lack of those soldiers who, by courage, physique, and initiative, are specially fitted to deal with them.

THE LEVELLER.

War is a great leveller; and one of the things we have to thank this war for is that it has brought us all to know and understand one another better. We have come to realise that, whilst in times of peace we pull one way and another, it is only by standing together four-square against the enemy that we can hope to win that victory without which all we have done in the past to build up a happy and contented people would be in vain. In the big rush of recruits to Victoria Barracks early this week there was a typical bushman, his swag on his back, his billy in his hand, and his dog at his side; and almost immediately on his heels came a well-groomed city solicitor. And among others were a teamster and a farmer, a bank clerk and a vaudeville artist, a cook and a surveyor, a shearer and "a man of independent means." It has been so all along. The city man and the country man, the rich man and the poor man—if it can be said that in this country we have any really poor men, except those who choose to be poor—have all been coming forward to fight for their King and country, to reinforce those brave men of ours who have risked their all for liberty and justice. Voluntaryism, if of late it has unfortunately fallen short of requirements, has, at all events, shown us that there is something in the soul which transcends all class and party feeling when a nation is face to face with a great crisis. Patriotism is a flame which never burns more brightly than in the hour of a nation's trial; and we doubt not the men to whom the call is now made will follow the light as others have followed it, and fight with the same spirit as that which has characterised the men of Anzac and Pozieres. It was in an address to "the heroes of Anzac" not long since that Mr. Hughes said:—"We have gloried in your achievements. When you have been overwhelmed by the storm of circumstances, we have wept for you; when you have been victorious, we have rejoiced with you." But it is not enough that we should rejoice in their victories and weep over their misfortunes; we must be prepared to go to their assistance as brothers in arms. The present month gives our young men an opportunity to show that they are made of the same brave stuff; and all will rejoice if, whilst the Government takes power to call them up, it should be found unnecessary to resort to this method. One volunteer is worth more than two conscripts; and we hope that, with Mr. Hughes's appeal to their best instincts—and there is no man who knows what the requirements are better than he does—there will be a gratifying increase in the number offering. No young man should neglect the opportunity of these days, bringing to mind, as they do, those other great days of which Wordsworth wrote:—"Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive, But to be young was very heaven."

We can none of us afford to neglect the duties which the times demand of us. If any party differences still remain, we must sink them, and go forth united in the path of duty. We must put the country's interests before all other interests. Greater than any Australian party is Australia itself; and greater still is the Empire. We cannot allow the smaller issues to obscure the larger. For our soldiers, though they fight in France, are fighting for us just as truly as if they were fighting in Australia. Canada is secure whatever happens, and probably New Zealand's insular position would help her, but there is no question of what an inconclusive peace would mean for Australia. In another twenty-five years we should have to fight it all over again. If by any chance this present war should go against us, Australia with her small population, her millions of broad acres and her boundless resources, would surely change hands. Let us not deceive ourselves. Labour interests and all other interests are in the melting-pot. In March last Mr. Hughes delivered a speech in England, in the course of which he said:—"We shall have enlisted by the beginning of June 300,000 men. The Australian is coming out to do battle for the country that made him what he is. It is a country in which free men live and can thrive. It is a country in which men imbibe the spirit of liberty with every pore; in which men, of necessity, take a wider outlook than those whose environment is more cramped. It is a country in which men would rather die than lose liberty." But why recall Mr. Hughes' speeches—his pride in Australia, his faith in the people? There is only one thing to be said: Faith without works is dead. Senator Pearce has told us that there must be 32,500 recruits by the end of September. If they are not forthcoming, there must be compulsion. The call is clear: our duty is plain; to neglect it is to hang our heads in shame for ever. We commend to all true unionists the words uttered by Daniel Webster in his address on the completion of the Bunker Hill monument on June 17, 1843:—"Woe betide the man who can stand here with the fires of local resentments burning, or the purpose of fomenting local jealousies and the strifes of local interests festering and rankling in his heart. Union established in justice, in patriotism, and the most plain and obvious common interest; union founded on the same love of liberty, cemented by blood shed in the same common cause; union has been the source of all our glory and greatness thus far, and is the ground of all our highest hopes. This column stands on Union." That is the light we would have our people follow. In this war we all belong to one grand British union, and as such we stand or fall.

THE REFERENDUM.

OCTOBER 28.

SOLDIERS ABROAD TO VOTE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The referendum on the question of conscription for service abroad will be held on Saturday, October 28. The writs will be issued on Monday, September 18, and after 6 o'clock on that day no person will be able to add his name to the rolls. The rolls are at present being printed, but supplementary rolls will be prepared for the referendum. Electors are reminded that enrolment is compulsory, and are advised to take the necessary steps to see that they are correctly enrolled.

A number of important statements in connection with the referendum were made to-day by the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes), the most interesting being that all members of the Australian Imperial Forces over 21 years of age at home or abroad will have a vote, and that no person of enemy origin in Australia, whether naturalised or unnaturalised, and no interned prisoner in the Commonwealth will be allowed to vote on the question.

A roll of the Australian soldiers in England, France, Egypt, and Rabaul, has already been compiled, and instructions for the taking of a vote among the troops have been cabled to London. The question to be submitted has been drafted, and the papers necessary for the taking of the referendum are now being printed. It is understood that the soldiers in the trenches will not be compelled to vote on October 28, but will be allowed to vote as soon as convenient before that date. Their voting papers will be collected in London, and the results will be cabled out by the High Commissioner on October 28 or 29.

With respect to the prohibition against naturalised or unnaturalised persons of enemy origin, the chief electoral officer (Mr. Oldham) stated to-day that it would be impossible to strike these people off the rolls, but instructions would be issued to the officers throughout the Commonwealth to challenge any person whose nationality or whose origin was at all doubtful. As far as possible the officers would in most cases be acquainted with the residents of the district in which they were acting. He considered that this precaution would be effective.

The machinery necessary for the taking of the referendum is complicated. It was stated to-day that the rolls at present contain 2,706,000 names. Approximately 34,000 officers will be required to conduct the poll, which will be taken at between 8000 and 9000 places.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH.

STATEMENT BY MR. HUGHES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In answer to an inquiry to-day as to what length the opponents of conscription would go in expressing their opinion on the platform, the Prime Minister made the following statement:—

"Everybody will be allowed full freedom of speech, limited only by consideration for the safety of the country, and recognition of the fact that we are in a state of war. Under cover of speaking against conscription it will not be permissible to preach sedition, to incite persons to refrain from enlisting, or to break the law of any State or of the Commonwealth. On the issue as to whether the voluntary system is to be relied on in order that Australia may do her part in this great struggle, there will be the fullest freedom of speech."

A private cable message has been received advising that Mr. Alister K. Jefferson has been granted a commission in the Royal Field Artillery. He left Australia in December last, and trained at Exeter and Shoeburyness. He was educated at Windlesham House, Brighton, and The King's School, Parramatta.

The Rev. Absalom Deans, B.A., of the Rockdale Congregational Church, has received a unanimous call to the Milton Church, Brisbane.

MORATORIUM.

EXTENSION OF PROVISIONS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) stated to-day that in view of the intention of the Ministry to call up men for training, and ultimately, if the referendum gave an affirmative vote, to send them abroad for service at the front, it was intended that the present moratorium should be extended as far as was found necessary. The present Federal moratorium prevents ejectment of wives and female dependents of soldiers who have volunteered and gone to the front, and extends the terms of mortgages on premises occupied by the families of dependants of soldiers. A somewhat similar measure has also been established by the South Australian Government. The proposal announced by Mr. Hughes is to cover any person called on under the compulsory provisions of the proposed law who has incurred liabilities which his absence from Australia will make it impossible for him to meet. If the States do not individually establish a moratorium on these lines, the Federal Ministry will take comprehensive action to cover the whole of Australia.

THE MAILS.

BALKANS

ROUMANIAN ADVANCE

RUSSIANS CROSSING ROUMANIA

BULGARS UNEASY

RETREAT FROM GREECE.

GREEK CRISIS.

PREMIER RESIGNS.

The Roumanians continue their rapid advance into Hungary, and the Austrians are withdrawing their armies.

Many thousands of Russian troops, having crossed the Danube, are traversing Roumania. It is suggested that they are marching on Bulgaria.

Russian warships have arrived at Constanza, a Roumanian port.

An unconfirmed report states that the Bulgarians are already retreating from Greece.

Only artillery activity is reported from the Salonica front.

The Greek Premier is said to have resigned. The elevation of M. Venizelos to the position, and a declaration of war on the Central Powers, are considered likely.

ROUMANIAN SUCCESSES.

OVER THE BORDER.

TROOPS' RAPID ADVANCE.

LONDON, Sept. 1.

Though telegrams from Bucharest are much delayed, Rome and Petrograd messages insist on the splendid results of the Roumanian attacks.

Bucharest bulletins show that the army is already in possession of every important pass leading into Transylvania.

The Roumanians, hastily descending the Carpathians in the direction of Brasso, seized two tunnels before the surprised Austrians were able to destroy them.

The Roumanians' rapid advance was aided by magnificent aeroplane reconnaissances, despite the mountainous conditions. Austria is poorly supplied with aeroplanes.

The mastery of the Danube by the Allies is now complete, and Rustchuk and other Bulgarian towns are exposed to destruction.

The Austrians claim that they are defending the road from the Danube near Orsova and the passes leading to Temesvar, where the Magyars are hastily fortifying the approaches.

ANOTHER TOWN IN DANGER.

The latest news from the Roumanian front states that the Austrians are preparing to evacuate Bistritz (a Hungarian town 30 miles from the frontier, and near the Borgo Pass) before the advancing Russians and Roumanians.

AUSTRIAN WITHDRAWAL.

Elsewhere the Austrians admit that they are withdrawing their fighting units. It is evident that they are unable to hold the frontier because all their troops are engaged in the Trentino, on the Isonzo front, and in Galicia. Experts point out that the natural place to defend Transylvania is on the frontier. No line further back gives better advantages. It is believed that no extensive effort will be made to construct defences in the interior of Transylvania.

DIFFICULT TERRAIN.

It is evident that the initial steps in Roumania's enterprise were easier than was expected, but the Allies must be aware of drawing sweeping conclusions. The greater part of Transylvania is a tangle of hills and woods, and unfavourable for the passage of armies.

The Russian Black Sea fleet is assisting in the defence of the Roumanian seaports.

INHABITANTS FLEE.

Twelve thousand inhabitants hurriedly left Brasso, carrying their valuables, when the Roumanians approached, but the greater part of the population remained. Elsewhere a large part of the frontier population is flying to the interior of Hungary.

ENEMY ADMISSIONS.

Berlin newspapers announce that the Roumanians advancing on Hermannstadt have junctioned with the troops from Brasso. The Russians and Roumanians are also in touch in Bukovina, where there is heavy fighting in the Gyergyoer Mountains.

German correspondents at Austrian headquarters urge the public not to be alarmed at further retirements. They admit that the Austrians are not now in a condition to hold a long new front, and further retirements are inevitable.

GERMAN EXPLANATION.

The "Berlin Tageblatt" states that the Austrian headquarters' plan provided for the systematic withdrawal of the Transylvanian army, which is taking place in perfect order, despite the proximity of the Roumanians. In the Eastern Carpathians the Austrians linked up with the Teuton Bukovina army by falling back on the crests and passes of the Gyargyver Range.

Commenting on the withdrawal from the Brasso Valley, the paper says the loss of that city is painfully felt in Hungary, but the loss is not final.

INITIAL FIGHTING.

The Rome "Messagero's" Petrograd correspondent says:—The initial fighting between the Roumanians and Hungarians on the Transylvanian frontier has raged for fifty hours on a wide front. The Roumanian right wing easily occupied Brasso, but their centre and left wing are being stubbornly resisted, especially at Vaillemento. The Roumanians have forced all the passes and have advanced to Venestovo.

The Hungarians violently attacked in the Iron Gate region, but were driven back with many losses.

HUNGARY INVADED.

The Roumanian Legation in Rome states that the resistance of the enemy is everywhere shattered. The army has penetrated deeply into Hungarian territory. Reports regarding the concentration of large enemy armies in Transylvania are mere "bluff."

Budapest newspapers declare that the invading forces outnumber the Hungarians fourfold, and that Turkish help is practically valueless.

A Bucharest message states that the Hungarians are fleeing before the Roumanian avalanche. The Hungarians are clamouring for concentrations of Hungarian troops to defend Hungary. Relations with Austria are approaching a crisis.

ENEMY'S TACTICS.

Vienna newspapers announce that the General Staff is considering the evacuation of all South-eastern Transylvania for the purpose of shortening the line.

New York military critics estimate that if the line is shortened it will mean the abandonment of at least 10,000 square miles to the Roumanians.

ENEMY REPORTS.

An Austrian communique states:—On the heights to the east of Herkuleshad the Roumanians were repulsed. We occupied new positions on the heights east of Csic Szereda.

RUSSIANS IN ROUMANIA.

WARMLY WELCOMED.

MARCHING TO BULGARIA.

An official Roumanian message states: Our Russian Allies are passing through Dobrudja, where they have been enthusiastically welcomed by the population.

The pontoons which the Russians have thrown across the Danube have already allowed many thousands of Russian troops to commence a march towards Bulgaria through Dobrudja.

Petrograd advices state that Russian warships have arrived at the Roumanian port of Constanza. The Bulgarians fear that the Russians will bombard Varna.

BULGARIA AND ROUMANIA.

WAR NOT DECLARED.

CENTRAL POWERS ANXIOUS.

A message from Copenhagen says that the Austrian and German Governments have expressed surprise at Bulgaria's hesitation.

A Rome wireless message states that Bulgaria asks for the assistance of 200,000 Turkish troops as a condition to declaring war upon Roumania.

Rome newspapers state that Austria has invited Bulgaria to declare war on Roumania, but Bulgaria has not replied. Her attitude is causing alarm in Vienna.

Another message states that Bulgaria is delaying her declaration of war on Roumania so as to gain as much time as possible to move her troops to the northern frontier, and possibly in the hope that a separate peace may be arranged by means of the good offices of the Roumanian Government.

The "Vossische Zeitung" says that the Roumanian Minister at Sofia demanded his passports on Thursday evening, and the Bulgarian Minister at Bucharest has left for Bulgaria. Bulgaria's declaration of war against Roumania is expected immediately.

Messages received in New York state that a Russian commander has reached Bucharest, and was warmly welcomed. He will see the King.

BALKAN ARMIES.

VON MACKENSEN'S COMMAND.

A Berne wireless message reported that General von Mackensen has been appointed to command the Balkan armies.

HINDENBURG'S PLANS.

UPSET BY ROUMANIA.

The "Daily Telegraph's" Petrograd correspondent says it is believed that General von Hindenburg lately had been preparing an offensive. He had brought up available reserves, including six divisions of Turks, which are now in Galicia and Transylvania. The intervention of Roumania has upset his plans.

CIVILIAN PRISONERS.

TREATMENT BY GERMANY.

PARIS, Aug. 31.

As the result of the Spanish Ambassador's negotiations, French civilian prisoners who have been working in Courland have been returned to the internment camps in Germany. It is hoped that a similar concession will be made in regard to the military prisoners.

ROLE OF SPAIN.

"PEACE AND CHARITY."

MADRID, Aug. 31.

King Alfonso, speaking at a banquet held by the National Club, in Bilbao, said that in the olden days the Spanish flag floated gloriously on the battlefield. Spain had no part in this war, and desires her flag to be the symbol of peace and charity in her relationship with all the belligerents.

KITCHENER MEMORIAL.

LONDON, Aug. 31.

The people of Orkney are erecting a monument to the memory of Lord Kitchener on lofty Marwick Head, near the scene of the Hampshire disaster. It will be visible afar on land and sea.

SALONICA.

BULGARS RETREAT

FROM SERVIAN FRONT.

LITTLE FIGHTING REPORTED.

LONDON, Sept. 1.

The latest telegrams from Athens indicate that the Bulgarians are retreating from Greece, and particularly from the Servian front.

The War Office has issued the following statement:—At Salonica there was only artillery activity on the Doiran and Struma fronts.

A Bulgarian communique states:—There is no essential change in Macedonia. Our troops have reached the positions assigned them, and are now consolidating.

GREECE.

RESIGNATION OF PREMIER.

DECLARATION OF WAR POSSIBLE.

LONDON, Sept. 1.

An Athens despatch received in New York says that the Greek Government has been thrown into a state of chaos by the resignation of M. Zalmis, the Greek Premier.

The fall of Zalmis and his neutrality Government, it is expected, will mean the immediate elevation of M. Venizelos to the post of Premier, and a declaration of war on the Central Powers.

Earlier despatches from Athens stated that Greece would abandon neutrality within 48 hours.

King Constantine will receive the Russian, French, and British Ministers to-morrow. All staff officers on holiday have been recalled.

THE RUSSIANS.

ATTACKS REPULSED.

BATTLE ON THE STOKHOD.

LONDON, Aug. 31.

A Russian communique states:—We repelled attacks on the west bank of the Stokhod, 34 miles north-east of Kovel, with heavy enemy losses.

GERMAN CLAIMS.

A German communique states:—Artillery battles have taken place west of Riga, at Dunaberg, a bridge-head on the Stokhod, and at a salient south-east of Kovel.

We repulsed counter-attacks at Kukul.

An Austrian communique states the enemy has developed increased artillery activity at numerous points on the Russian frontier.

MORE GERMAN TROOPS.

A Paris report states that Germany has despatched towards Russia nine divisions from France, although the Germans are greatly outnumbered on the Somme.

RUSSIA'S WHEAT.

SOON TO BE RELEASED.

LONDON, Aug. 31.

Bathgate's report on the effect of the action of Roumania on the wheat market says:—It is almost a certainty that Russian wheat will be available in large quantities before the end of the season, either through Salonica or the Dardanelles. Russia's harvest for 1916 amounts to 90 million quarters, in addition to 70 million quarters stored. The wheat available in America will then no longer be able to dictate prices.

GERMAN HIGH COMMAND

VON HINDENBURG.

HAILED AS "DELIVERER."

LONDON, Sept. 1.

An Amsterdam message, referring to the dismissal of von Falkenhayn and the appointment of von Hindenburg as Chief of the German General Staff, states that the population of Berlin hails von Hindenburg as the deliverer. The city is beflagged, and the hero's portrait is in shop windows, garlanded and illuminated.

A Paris message states:—Von Hindenburg's appointment represents a triumph for Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, as von Falkenhayn and the General Staff, representing the War-to-Death party, wanted to dethrone the more moderate Chancellor, who always championed von Hindenburg.

Von Falkenhayn promised the German Emperor to take Verdun in a fortnight, and the Crown Prince, hoping to achieve a personal triumph, warmly supported von Falkenhayn against von Hindenburg's repeated requests for reinforcements. The failure at Verdun has cost von Falkenhayn his place and Imperial favour.

DICTATORIAL POWERS.

The Berlin correspondent of the "New York Times" says that the German Emperor has given von Hindenburg practically dictatorial powers. His appointment is designed to act as a tonic on the moral of the German nation.

"NERVOUS STRAIN."

Karl von Wiegand, the Berlin correspondent of the "New York World," in a despatch, shows that Germany had an attack of "nerves," in consequence of a report that the United States was seeking an excuse to enter the war against the Central Powers. The report arose out of American resentment at the threatened revival of attacks on merchantmen.

Von Wiegand, who interviewed high officials, states that Germany does not contemplate a renewal of submarine warfare. She desires more cordial relations with the United States.

"We've no wish to help England to play a trump card against us by bringing in America—certainly, not at this time," said one official.

The German people are under a terrific nervous strain. The news of von Hindenburg's appointment was like a lightning flash piercing a dark cloud. The people are not closing their eyes to the tremendous task before them, but von Hindenburg's appointment has revived the spirits of the entire nation.

GERMAN DESERTERS.

LONDON, August 31.

Two hundred and ninety-four German deserters have been court-martialled at Liege.

WEST FRONT.

LITTLE ACTIVITY.

BAVARIANS SURRENDER.

LONDON, Aug. 30.

General Sir Douglas Haig in his midday report of Thursday says:—In the Martinpuich operations reported last night 126 Bavarians did not attempt to return to their lines, and surrendered.

We employed gas at Arras and Armentieres.

Our machine-gun fire stopped the enemy's attempt to attack in the vicinity of High Wood.

Eight officers were amongst the prisoners captured to-day.

FRENCH FRONT.

A French communique states: A German coup-de-main in Parroy Forest penetrated portion of our trenches. Our counterattack drove them out immediately.

A French communique issued late on Thursday, stated:—A grenade attack on our positions at Maurepas Wood was easily repulsed. Minor operations south of the Somme enabled us to progress south of Estrees and south-west of Soyecourt Wood, where we took some prisoners.

TOWARDS THIEPVAL.

French military critics point out that the British continue to progress towards Thiepval, which the Germans are not likely to hold long, although they do not hesitate to sacrifice the elite of the army in their efforts to regain the ground. The British occupy all the dominating heights between Mouquet Farm and Courcelette. They thus dominate Thiepval, from points which place the only communications of the Germans under constant British artillery fire.

GERMAN CLAIMS.

A German communique states:—Near Roclincourt our patrols captured a number of English in trenches. We lost a trench which was projecting towards the enemy.

ROLL OF HONOUR.

The death is announced, while a prisoner in Germany, of Lieutenant James Dennistoun, of Peel Forest, Canterbury, New Zealand, who was a member of Captain Scott's expedition to the Antarctic. His biplane caught fire, and descended in the enemy's lines.

Lieutenant Rowland Alston, of the Field Artillery, a resident of Herbert River, Queensland, and Captain Keith Forbes-Robertson, of the Rifle Brigade, a former resident of Melbourne, have been killed in action.

THE AUSTRALIANS.

"JOLLY GOOD SOLDIERS."

REMARKABLE TRIBUTE.

LONDON, Sept. 1.

The newspapers are publishing an article by a correspondent who, aboard a hospital ship, interviewed a wounded colonel who paid a notable tribute to the achievements of the Australians at Pozieres. "They are too good to need recommendation," he said, "their modesty has been sorely tried by the adulation lavished on them. It is a striking fact that they have become such jolly good soldiers that they have learned to hate the extravagant praise bestowed on them, and resent the suggestion that they are better than their English comrades. Altogether they are a very fine force. Many of them formerly held important positions, and their training has made them resourceful and excellent campaigners. Their practical goodwill is a great asset, namely, they are anxious to be really good soldiers from a professional military point of view.

"Their intelligence," he continued, "has shown them the vital necessity for discipline. No soldiers are keener on every detail in discipline. They do not think it red tape. They have seen for themselves that success in big fighting is otherwise impossible. There is a singular uniformity in the Australians' opinion regarding the Germans. They admit the war machine is efficient, but regard the individual Hun with strong contempt—a complete rotter, vastly inferior, and less civilised than the Turk. When it comes to close fighting the Prussian Guardsman is a dingo. Every time I interviewed Australian officers I heard about the way the English advanced—like on parade. They were surprised when they saw it. The Australian bushmen, with the developed bump for locality, is valuable in this fighting. No ordinary mortal can be expected to avoid losing his direction.

"Our Lewis gunners are a useful lot. On one occasion when the Germans started to attack under cover of a heavy barrage, while our artillery put up a hot counter-barrage 30 yards in front of our trenches, three machine-gunners nipped out through both barrages, and enfiladed the attackers, who swerved and surprised the occupants of the trenches further to the right, capturing fifty Australians. When the enemy was returning with them, the three gunners reopened fire and killed many. They stopped firing with a view to avoiding killing their own comrades, but by threat of reopening their fire, drove back the whole bunch to our trenches. On another occasion the leader of a procession of prisoners held up an enormous cigar box. We were prepared for foul play, but it was full of cigars as a propitiatory offering."

MOUQUET FARM.

HEAVY NIGHT'S FIGHTING.

Captain C. E. W. Bean, official press representative with the Australian Imperial Forces, cabling from the British Headquarters in France, under date of August 30, says:—

Another heavy night's fighting has taken place in Mouquet Farm, and the trench labyrinth around it. Thunderstorms had drenched the ground, so that it was almost impossible to stand on the slippery clay. The Western Australians and New South Welshmen charged over it through a wild night, and entered the farm and portion of the enemy's ground north-east of it. But the line had been broken up largely owing to the vile nature of the weather. The fighting resolved itself into a struggle between separate parties. The Germans were thick in the trenches. Many were killed, but others swarming between isolated groups of Australians cut them off and forced them to retire. A bleak rainstorm has been drenching the ridge ever since.

MERCHANT SHIPPING.

LONDON, Aug. 31.

The [illegible] steamer [illegible] left Puget Sound for Sydney.

THE ITALIANS.

ATTACKS REPULSED.

IN TRENTINO DISTRICTS.

LONDON, Aug. 31.

An Italian communique states:—We repulsed attacks on the Upper Posina and Astico Valleys.

The enemy intensely bombarded our new positions at Mount Cauriol (in the Upper Trentino), which command the Fiemme Valley. We threaten the enemy's communications between Cavalese and the Upper Avisto Valley.

The enemy is trying to consolidate his positions in the Gorizia and Carso areas.

We drove off an attack at Tivoli.

RAN THE BLOCKADE.

GERMAN SHIP FOR EAST AFRICA

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.

A wireless message from Berlin says that the German steamer Marie (1866 tons), which arrived in Batavia (Dutch East Indies) in May, ran the blockade in the North Sea. She eluded three lines of blockade ships, and once was within five yards of a British gunboat. She succeeded in taking supplies to the German East African forces. She was hit many times during a bombardment by a warship.

GALLANT CONDUCT.

LONDON, Sept. 1.

Military medals for distinguished services have been awarded the following members of the Australian infantry:—

Lance-corporal J. H. Blythe.

Privates M. McCheyne, T. Mellor, C. M. Nuttall, P. Smith.

SUBMARINES.

ATTACK ON OWEGO.

GERMAN ADMISSION.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.

Germany has admitted that a submarine attacked the American steamer Owego when she refused to halt, but disavowed any unfriendly intention.

Mr. R. Lansing, Secretary of State, is satisfied, and the incident is now closed.

The German Note says that on August 3 a submarine signalled the Owego to stop and fired warning shots. As these were disregarded, the submarine opened fire at 2000 meters. The Owego then hoisted the American flag. The submarine signalled her to send her papers. The captain of the steamer did not comply and did not launch a boat. The submarine then fired across the vessel, whereupon the first officer boarded the submarine and explained that the submarine had not been seen before. The American Ambassador in Berlin, Mr. Gerard, says that Germany claims that the steamer's behaviour was not in accord with the rules of international law, and the captain would be to blame if there were unpleasant results.

AUSTRIAN REPLY.

Austria has sent a reply to the American protest against the attack on the American ship Petrolite. The reply is believed to be conciliatory.

NO GERMAN WARSHIPS.

LONDON, Sept. 1.

A Christiania message says that steamers report that there are scarcely any German warships to be encountered in the North Sea. There is an increasing number of Zeppelins patrolling and communicating by wireless with submarines.

ASIATIC CAMPAIGN.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE CONTINUES.

A Russian communique states:—We repulsed Turkish attacks westward of Gumush Khan, between Erzingan and Trebizond. The enemy left many dead.

Our advance continues in the direction of Diarbekir.

NEUTRALITY.

AND AMERICAN IDEALS.

ROOSEVELT'S DENUNCIATION.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.

Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, making a vigorous denunciation of German-Americans, said there had been a revival of anti-Americanism, for which President Wilson was responsible. Any attempt to organise the Americans along political or racial lines was foul, evil, and treasonable.

"I condemn those who would give their first service to Germany," he said. "America should have demanded that the European war be conducted in accordance with civilised usage. Then there would have been no invasion of Belgium, no torpedoing of merchantmen, no extermination of Armenians, no massacring of women and children, no murder of Nurse Cavell."

"President Wilson's neutrality might be compared with the neutrality of Pontius Pilate, but the comparison would be unjust to the latter. President Wilson's policy in Mexico had resulted in the loss of more American lives than the Spanish-American war, and trouble continues to rage as fiercely as ever in Mexico."

President Wilson had treated the Hague Convention like a scrap of paper, when he declined to make even a protest on behalf of tortured Belgium, and submitted tamely to the Lusitania [illegible]. It was a moral degradation that America had stood an idle spectator of these atrocities.

REPRISALS.

RED CROSS APPEAL.

TREATMENT OF PRISONERS.

LONDON, Sept. 1.

The International Red Cross Committee has addressed belligerents and neutrals, imploring belligerents to abandon reprisals on prisoners of war, which is a reversion to methods of barbarism, and unworthy of nations which have given the Red Cross its present position.

The committee says if a belligerent believes its soldiers who are prisoners are unfairly treated it should appeal through neutral countries to its adversary's feelings of generosity, and not have immediate recourse to retaliation, thereby inflicting suffering in cold blood on unhappy, defenceless prisoners, hoping thereby to compel its adversary to yield. The policy of reprisals to-day has resulted in barbarous methods, of which the motive is vengeance. The reprisals are the more unjust and cruel because they are often due to inaccurate information.

Viscount Grey (Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs) has replied that Britain throughout discountenanced reprisals owing to the indiscriminating and unjust operation of such a policy. The German Government, however, had perpetuated a succession of outrages which had strained the temper and patience of the British people to a breaking-point, and created a situation of the utmost gravity. These outrages include the sinking of the Lusitania and Sussex, the brutal execution of Nurse Cavell, and the criminal desertion of prisoners at Wittenberg when stricken with disease initiated by a callous disregard by the German authorities of ordinary hygienic precautions. The International Red Cross Committee appeal to the belligerents not to obtain the redress of grievances by reprisals, but to request neutrals to impress upon the enemy concerned considerations of humanity and justice. The British Government readily responds to the appeal, being confident the committee and neutrals will recognise that the surest means of avoiding reprisals is to promote an abandonment of the policy inspiring them.

THE COST IN MEN.

AUGUST CASUALTIES.

The "Daily Telegraph" says that the British casualties published in August were 4633 officers and 123,097 men, of whom 1156 officers and 19,520 men were killed. The casualties published in June totalled 31,501, and in July 59,071.

COMPULSION

NEW ZEALAND ACT IN OPERATION.

A proclamation was issued last night directing the enrolment of the first division of the Expeditionary force reserve. The whole Dominion has been placarded with copies of the proclamation, which has also been distributed from house to house. The enrolment of the second division will be proclaimed to-morrow. It is estimated there will be 10,000 fresh enrolments of men who did not register under the national Registration Act some time ago.

COMPULSION.

PRIME MINISTER'S SPEECH.

Referendum Justified.

BRITAIN'S REQUEST TO AUSTRALIA.

In the House of Representatives yesterday Mr. Hughes made a passionate appeal for support for the Government's scheme for maintaining reinforcements for the army.

He said the Imperial Government looked to Australia to keep her troops who were in the firing line at their full strength.

To accomplish this it will be necessary to provide 32,500 men in September, and 16,500 in each of the three following months.

The Government proposals, he said, provided the speediest and most certain method of securing these reinforcements.

Mr. Hughes declared that he would support the referendum as the one thing in life he lived for.

IN PARLIAMENT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Both Houses of the Federal Parliament met this morning. Interest was centred in the House of Representatives, where the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) amplified the policy of the Government regarding compulsory service.

The Minister for Defence, Senator Pearce, also addressed the Senate on the subject, covering practically the same ground as his leader. Mr. Hughes spoke for nearly an hour, during which time he had the closest attention of members of both sides. When he had finished his remarks the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Cook) secured the adjournment of the debate till Wednesday. In the Senate, Senator Millen secured the adjournment. The only other business dealt with in the House of Representatives was the reading of a Supply Bill for £5,023,580 for the first time. Practically no debate took place, and both Houses adjourned at the luncheon hour until Wednesday next.

THE SPEECH.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) said: I desire to proceed to an examination of the proposals I have had the honour to lay before Parliament in order to ascertain whether they are adequate to meet present circumstances. It will be well, I think, that I should again state what these are. Australia is not only committed to assist Great Britain in this war, but it is her war, and upon the issue of it her fortunes absolutely depend. She is, therefore, fighting her own battle, and she must not fail. Hitherto by general consent she has not failed. We have so far at least done as well as any other portion of the Empire. I will say no more than that. That is a sufficient boast of which we may legitimately be proud, that in this great hour of trial we have at least kept pace with the rest of our race throughout this Empire.

Mr. Fowler: We have not in the matter of numbers.

Mr. Hughes: Hitherto Great Britain has refrained even from suggesting how many troops we should send; but recent circumstances have compelled her to disregard that traditional reticence which very properly hedges about the relations between Great Britain and the self-governing dominions, and she now tells us in plain words what we are expected to do. It remains for us to do it.

A PLAIN PROPOSITION.

Now, I propose to examine the Government's proposals in the light of the position as I have just stated it in order to see whether the proposals are adequate. If they are they ought to receive the unanimous support of the House. If they are not they ought to be unanimously rejected. I say that without any condition of reservation of any sort or kind. What has to be done is a plain proposition. It is not indefinite. The nation now is not the sport of mere hysterical emotion, but there is set before it a definite task which it cannot escape with honour, and which it cannot avoid. It is a definite task, it is a definite duty, it is a clear duty. Australia has to provide 32,500 men in September, 16,500 men in October, 16,500 men in November, and 16,500 men in December.

16,500 MEN EACH MONTH.

We may assume, although we are not told so, that the demand for reinforcements thereafter will continue on that scale, that is to say, 16,500 a month.

Mr. Cook: Have you any figures showing the number of men now in camp?

Mr. Hughes: If you will let me, I will say everything I know, evading nothing. I am standing here not as leader of a party endeavouring to conceal things, but as a man charged with the responsibility of leading a nation at this moment. I will reveal everything, and cast the burden of responsibility on the people, a responsibility which I do not wish to evade, and which they cannot. That is the position. We have a definite task before us. In my opinion the question is: Are the Government proposals adequate to enable us to carry it out. In my opinion they are. Let me put the thing in figures in a detailed way so that we shall see exactly what we are called upon to do, and what material we have already in hand to do it with, and how far the Government proposals ensure the continuous and ample stream of reinforcements which is demanded. I think I may repeat what has to be done in order that I may contrast it immediately with the figures showing what we are to do it with. In September the demand is 32,500 men, in October 16,500, in November 16,500, and in December 16,500, or a gross total of 82,000 up to the end of this year. In January the demand is for 16,500, in February for 16,500, and in March 16,500, or a grand total up to the end of March of 131,500.

TROOPS AT THE FRONT.

The troops at the front are four divisions in France, and the Light Horse Division and details in Egypt. There were in camp in Australia up to a few days ago 43,512, in England 44,511, and on the water 15,000, making a grand total of 103,023. From this must be deducted from the troops in England 20,000 for what is known as the Third Division, but is in reality the Fifth Division, and the estimated wastage on 103,000, that is 10,000, making a total deduction of 30,000, and leaving available for reinforcements 73,023, after providing for the Fifth Division. Those figures not only comply with the direct demand of the British authorities, but cover the three succeeding months of January, February, and March. I want to show the exact position we shall be in each month to meet the demand, assuming, of course, that no troops of any kind either volunteers or those compelled should be added to the numbers now available.

FORCES IN ENGLAND.

This will be the number of troops in England during each of the months of September to January. There are 44,500 now there, and, say, 7000 arriving during the month; that makes 51,500. During that month 20,000 special and 12,000 normal reinforcements, in all 32,500, will be needed, and that will leave a balance of 19,000 troops in England. In October one month's reinforcements of 12,500 will be needed as normal reinforcements, and this will increase the balance of troops in England to 31,500, upon which there will be a demand for a month of 16,500, leaving a balance in England of 15,000. In November there will arrive 12,500 reinforcements from the pool already existing in Australia, making the grand total in England 27,500. The demand upon this total will be 16,500, which reduces the balance to 11,000. In December there will arrive 12,500 normal reinforcements already existing in Australia. That gives a total in England of 23,000 upon which the demand for 16,500 will be made, reducing the balance in England to 7000. In January reinforcements numbering 12,500 will be landed, bringing the total up to 19,500. The demand for that month will be 16,500, and the balance left will be 3000 men.

FRESH SUPPLIES NECESSARY.

I want members to follow this very closely. That is the result of a complete compliance with the demand of the Army Council without bringing one more soldier into the pool, into camp. We shall have taken all the men there are now here, and there will be 3000 men left in England. It is a very obvious thing that if we would be sure that the war would end on December 31 the position would be entirely satisfactory. No man can put a period to this war, and it does appear to me that it would be criminal folly to assume any such thing. We should rather prepare for another complete year of war than anticipate any premature peace. The Government proposals have to be regarded in the light not only of providing for the demand of the Army Council out of the soldiers now available, but of obtaining that fresh supply of recruits necessary to maintain the steady flow of trained soldiers. Nothing else will suffice. Mere men are of no avail. To send an untrained man into the trenches is murder. To send him to support his comrades who are fighting our battle for their lives is to assist them not at all. We would do better to keep the men here than to send them away.

COMPULSORY TRAINING.

The proposals of the Government are these:—That, in October, if during the month of September the number of recruits equivalent to the number taken out under the Army Council's demand, namely, 32,500, do not join, the compulsory provisions of the Defence Act will be put into force so that the necessary number will be under training. It will operate immediately, so that by the end of October there will be at least 32,500 men who were not in camp on the first day of September, who will be in camp or in process of getting there. There will come into camp either as a direct result of the appeal made to their patriotism, or as a direct result of the provisions of the Defence Act, 32,500 men. It follows, therefore, that the number of men who come into training in Australia will exactly coincide with the number of trained men sent out as reinforcements, and to make up the 20,000 men of the 5th Division.

What we are here to-day to do is not to consider any pet idea we have as to how these men ought to be got. The thing is to get the men, and any scheme that does not get them must be condemned; and any scheme that does must be applauded and supported.

NO DELAY INVOLVED.

It is urged that the proposal of the Government involves delay. It involves no delay. I say deliberately that it is the only proposal adequate to the circumstances that will ensure the number of men and involve no delay. What is the alternative to this? Honourable members—no, I will not say honourable members, but some organs of the press that profess to represent public opinion, but who, I am sure, grossly misrepresent it—(Ministerial applause)—pretend that what is necessary in the circumstances is that we should have so little faith in Australia that we should bludgeon it into a course that it will take gladly.

Mr. Cook: I don't hear a cheer from that side.

Mr. Hughes: The Government is condemned because it does not force through this House and Parliament proposals for compelling persons to serve oversea without either consulting the people or in any way having regard to their feelings.

ALTERNATIVE TO REFERENDUM.

I say this deliberately—if there is one man here who can show me in what way these proposals could have been made the law of the land—until they have received the sanction of this Parliament—within the time that will be occupied in taking this referendum I shall gladly abandon my proposal and let him take upon himself the speedier way. (Ministerial applause.) I want to speak quite frankly to both sides of the House. The alternative to the referendum, as is parfectly well known, is an election. Every man in this House knows perfectly well that to introduce a bill for compulsion would involve a fierce and acrimonious debate.

Mr. Finlayson (Q.): Hear, hear.

Mr. Hughes: It would have inflamed the minds of the people. It would have inflamed party warfare. We should have had in this House the division of opinion which is obvious outside. Though there may have been in this House a majority in favour of the bill, would any man say that there would have been a majority in the other House? I am not looking at this as a party man. I am looking at facts as every man knows them. I have been all my public life that man who stood out for compelling the people to serve their country. (Applause.) There may have been on my own side, there certainly was not on the other, one man who stood by me.

Mr. Cook: Not true.

Mr. Hughes: I mean what I say.

THEIRS THE SPEEDIEST WAY.

While I have also been all my life in favour of compulsion for home defence, I have been against sending men out of this country, but circumstances have compelled me to disregard all convictions and ideas. We are faced with facts. What does it matter what we thought previously. We are face to face with iron circumstances. All I have to consider is the best and quickest way to have this thing done which has to be done. The Ministry's proposals are the speediest way to get the men we want.

Sir Robert Best: The bill was not necessary.

Mr. Hughes: First of all you must consider the proposal of the Ministry both as it relates to the compulsory provisions of the Defence Act to ensure training of a sufficient supply of men, and the question whether these provisions should be extended to oversea service. It is not denied and cannot be denied that the provisions of the Defence Act which ensure the adequate training of a sufficient number of men leave nothing to be desired. It may be urged that there is a delay of one month. I venture to say that criticism will not bear inspection. We have at present an ample supply of troops to meet all the requirements up to and including January, 1917. There will be on the 1st day of October 32,500 men in camp who are not in camp now. They will be fresh men.

THREE MONTHS IN CAMP.

It takes three months to train a soldier under our system, little enough, but that is the time. There will be 32,500 men trained during October, November, and December. They will be available on the first day of January, 1917, for despatch oversea. In November there will come in an additional 16,500 men. They will be available for despatch on February 1. In fact, if honorable members will look, not at their preconceived notions of this proposal, but at the proposal itself, they will see that it provides for a sufficient number of men, and ensures an adequate period of training. One point is to be considered. We are 12,000 miles from England, our troops are useless here, and they have to be sent oversea before they can be effective in this great fight, therefore, the question of transport enters in.

TRANSPORT QUESTION.

Our present transport is limited to a capacity of 13,000 men a month. In order to obtain other transports we have to appeal to the British Admiralty. As those ships are available they will be sent, but at any rate no additional transports can be available for at least 10 weeks. If the additional transports were here it would not affect the position in so far as our ability to meet the demands of the army council is concerned. That is assured in the way I have stated out of the trained men now available. I want to say, while it is in my mind, that the date on which the referendum will be held is October 28 next, and it is quite immaterial whether it takes two, three, or five weeks to pass this bill, the referendum will be taken on that date. (Laughter.)

REFERENDUM BILL.

I venture to say that the Referendum Bill will pass without any difficulty at all.

Mr. Fowler (W.A.): You believe that the people are in favour of conscription?

Mr. Hughes: There can be no discussion out of a reference of the general question to the people.

Sir Robert Best: You can bring in conscription without a referendum.

Mr. Hughes: There is a necessity for either a referendum or an election—not in my own mind—but it was inevitable in the circumstances—(applause and interruption)—as honourable members know full well that any bill to enforce service overseas without first referring the question to the people would not have gone through.

Mr. Watt: Supposing the honourable gentleman opposite had been in favour of conscription, would there have been a need for either a referendum or an election?

Mr. Hughes: I think there would if the whole Parliament were unanimous. It would fairly reflect the opinion of the whole people, but those who are against compulsion do not reflect their own opinions but the opinion of a large number of persons outside, so I must say this, that the people must be consulted. (Ministerial applause.) My point is that we have taken the right course to ensure an adequate supply of men, for the right course must be that course which gets men soonest.

Mr. Watt: The referendum cannot bind the Senate.

THE FINAL ARBITERS.

Mr. Hughes: I do not say it can, but what I want to say quite frankly is that the Government will consider the verdict of the people as sufficient authority.

Mr. Fowler: You said a few moments ago that you believed that the people were in favour of conscription.

Several questions were asked across the Chamber and the Speaker rose to ask members to restrain their curiosity and allow Mr. Hughes to make his speech in his own way.

Mr. Hughes: I have answered for myself that what the people say goes, otherwise an intolerable condition of things would prevail if Parliament could deliberately flout the expressed will of the people.

Mr. Cook: Will the Ministry as a Ministry be behind the Referendum?

Mr. Hughes: For myself I am going for this Referendum as if it were the only thing for which I live. (Loud applause.)

Mr. Cook: And the Ministry?

Mr. Hughes: I speak for the Ministry.

Mr. Watt: And all the Ministers?

Mr. Hughes: There is one other phase. It may be asserted that there was no necessity for Parliamentary sanction, that the Government might have imposed compulsion upon the people without consulting Parliament or referring the matter to the electors. I don't know whether that view finds favour in the mind of any member. I venture to say that it is quite incompatible with responsible Parliamentary government. That would not be tolerated by those who are very stalwart supporters of this principle, and it would not have prevented political chaos. It would have precipitated it. You must have something behind you, the people or the Parliament. It can in this way get the sanction of both.

OPINION OF PARLIAMENT.

There may be a majority of members of Parliament who are opposed to compulsion. They are not opposed to referring the matter to the people. The minority must bow to the decision of the people. We are all democrats on both sides of the House.

Mr. Cook: You have the support of the House.

Mr. Watt: The majority.

Mr. Hughes: You know perfectly well there is an August body to which we are not permitted to refer other than to say that "in another place." Mr. Cook for ten months stood here, endeavouring to get that other place to do the things he wanted. No doubt they are subdued. (Great laughter.) A double dissolution would have taken at least four months. Then you would have got to begin to do the things we are doing now. (Ministerial cheers.) It is going on now. When members say these proposals are insufficient, I ask them to show me where they are not sufficient, because we have abundant faith in the people. One of the arguments is supposing the people turn the proposal down—have we so little faith in the people of Australia when they realise the gravity of the circumstances that they are not prepared to do their duty—if the people are of that mind, and would turn it down, then our appeal to the people by way of an election would have resulted in a Parliament returned against conscription.

FAITH IN THE PEOPLE.

I will never believe that the people will not carry this by an overwhelming majority. No effort of mine shall be spared to bring that about. With the assistance of members on both sides, we shall do it, nor shall we excite the turmoil of an election or that which would have been brought about by attempting to dragoon anything against the will of the people. What democrat can oppose it, what patriot can declare the course to be advocated as unnecessary? The people are to decide. We are not to suppose we are to get this great privilege without some disapproval. Only last night we had a popular manifestation of this disapproval.

Mr. Cook: Very unpopular.

Mr. Hughes: The Government knows its duty in regard to this matter. It will have no more regard to the attempt of people to browbeat it by force than it would to the articles of scurrilous abuse which are now heaped upon it by journals which forty-eight hours ago were posing as those who had sunk all party considerations. We shall go on, and I charge every man in this country with doing his duty and assisting the Government in this great crisis. I say, you would not have done it in a better way. You cannot charge the Government with the neglect of its duty unless it fails to get the men, and if we fail and the people fail, God help Australia. (Cheers.)

THE MINIMUM AGE.

It is said that these proposals do not reach the right men. There are now available, other than those in camp till June 9, 152,910 single men without dependents. These are men between 18 and 44. We do not propose to take men under 21. I think we are wise. Many of us have sent our sons who are under 21, but in my opinion it would have been better if the boys under 21 had not been sent. They do not recover from their wounds as rapidly as older men. There are 152,910 fit single men between 18 and 44. Eliminating those between 18 and 21 we have got an ample field on which we can work. These are the men to whom this appeal and the provisions of the Defence Act will apply. These are the men whom we want to reach. They will be reached.

AN APPEAL FOR SUPPORT.

The proposals will reach the right men and get them in the right time with the least possible friction. When we have done this thing, and if we get the sanction of the people, we will have the men trained ready to go without delay. The demand of the Army Council will be complied with, and Australia will have done her duty. It is a duty which presses heavily on all sorts and conditions. It is a duty which has to be faced, and we are confronted with difficulties on all hands. The Government has taken the course that I am satisfied time and consideration will convince the great majority of the people was the right one. I ask every member and individual citizen of the Commonwealth to stand behind the Government. Help us in our difficult position, and help us to do our duty and to do it with as little friction as possible.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hughes's speech, Mr. Cook secured the adjournment of the debate till Wednesday.

The Prime Minister had previously given notice that on Wednesday next he would move for leave to bring in a bill for a military service referendum.

IN THE SENATE.

MINISTER'S SPEECH.

TRAINING AND TRANSPORT PROBLEMS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce), in the Senate, also made an explanation of the Government proposals. He said that they recognised that Australia was a democratic country, and that the people had a right to be consulted before a change was made in a vital policy. The people could only be consulted by a general election of one or both Houses or by a referendum. The obligation was laid upon the opponents of the proposal to say that men should be sent oversea without their consent. If it was once conceded that the people had a right to be consulted no further objection could be made to the proposal. A direct compulsory bill would have been the subject of a fierce debate in both Houses, and if it had led to an election four or five months would have been lost. Such a bill would certainly not have received a speedy passage in the Senate.

Senator Shannon: Are you assured of a speedy passage after the referendum?

Senator Pearce: The blood of members would be upon their own heads if they refused to carry out the declared desires of the people. Conscription had not been put before the people by either party at the last election. If there was a majority for conscription as proposed at the referendum, the decision would be given effect to. If a majority of the people opposed compulsory service, Parliament had no right to carry it out.

PERIOD OF TRAINING.

Continuing, Senator Pearce said it had been the practice to give men three months' training before embarkation from Australia, and it was proposed to continue that system, but if the necessity arose there was no reason why troops should not be sent from Australia at the end of two months and complete their training on arrival in England. This might be necessary to fit in with the shipping arrangements.

Senator Millen: That will not shorten their total length of training before they go to the front.

Senator Pearce: The men would receive the same length of training, but more training in England and less in Australia. The Government's first proposal if the necessary reinforcements in September were not forthcoming by the voluntary system was to take the single men into camp and they would be receiving their training during October. The referendum would then be taken at the end of October, and if the Government received authority these men could be sent away at any time after the poll.

"There were some people who said that Australia should not send any more troops out of the country, that we had already sent enough. The answer to that was that from July 19 to August 6 the Australian casualties in France numbered 13,363, and for eleven days of that period the casualties numbered 6743. Those figures provided an effective and crushing reply to the people who said that Australia had already done enough. The Australian troops were holding a definite portion of the line in France, and if the men there were not kept up to full strength an awful burden would be cast upon those who were left. These men at the front were our brothers and fellow citizens, and had offered their all to the country. There was, therefore, an implied obligation to see that every battalion was kept up to full strength. From that position there was no escape. Some critics of the Government said that the voluntary system had supplied all the men needed. The Ministry had stood solidly so far for the voluntary system in the face of much criticism. Up to May there were sufficient men going into camp voluntarily to provide for the monthly reinforcements, and, therefore, no necessity arose for the consideration of any other method of enlistment; but in June the number of recruits was not sufficient to provide the necessary reinforcements for the month.

SHIPPING PROBLEM.

Another point that must not be lost sight of was the shipping problem. The Navy Department reported that they could send to Europe with the present available shipping 13,000 men a month. New shipping arrangements could not be made in less than ten weeks, and, therefore, for ten weeks from now men could not be sent away at a greater rate than at the rate of 13,000 a month. This point must be remembered by those who declared that the Government's scheme meant a waste of time.

According to the war census there were at the present time 150,000 fit single men between the ages of 18 and 44 in this country. From this total would have to be deducted the men between the ages of 18 and 21, but he could not accept the estimate of some newspapers that the total numbers of men between 18 and 21 would come to 60,000.

"Up to the end of March there would be needed, besides the 72,000 men already available, 60,000 single men without dependents to stand by their comrades at the front and give them the backing they needed and deserved. That was the sacrifice Australia was asked to make under the Government's proposal. The Government was asking those men to bear the sacrifice upon whom the burden would be lightest. One of the painful things he had noticed during the operation of the voluntary system was the number of men going to the front whom he could not but feel in his heart should never have been allowed to go. He had known of many cases where soldiers had left wives and several children with little in the way of a stand-by, while at the same time he had seen single men, healthy and strong, without an obligation of any kind, staying behind and doing nothing in connection with the war.

Senator Lynch: There must have been 50,000 married men leave Australia for the front already.

Senator Pearce: In the early stages of the war it was calculated that about 12 per cent. of the men were married. He therefore thought that the total number of married men now would be rather less than 50,000.

At the conclusion of Senator Pearce's statement, Senator Millen secured the adjournment of the debate, and the Senate rose till Wednesday next.

LABOUR COUNCIL.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Hughes, addressed the central executive of the Victorian Political Labour Council at its meeting last evening. The meeting was held in camera, but it is understood that Mr. Hughes made known several facts which in his opinion would tend to break down much of the opposition that is being shown to the Federal Government's scheme.

WESTERN AUSTRALIAN GOLD YIELD.

PERTH (W.A.), Friday.

The August gold output was 91,735 ounces, valued at £389,665. The production is 902 ounces less than the previous month, and 9266 ounces less than in August last year.

WAR NOTES.

ADVANCE IN TRANSYLVANIA.

The cables this morning contain increasing evidences of the Austrian reluctance to attempt to hold the very awkward crooked line represented by the Transylvanian frontier. Already they have fallen back before the Roumanian advance without even offering a determined resistance in the main passes. The German papers are promising the people that the loss of Brasso is but temporary, but the correspondents at Austrian headquarters are quietly preparing public opinion for further sacrifices of territory. But, although the enemy has apparently decided to shorten his line, it would be unwise to expect him to allow the Roumanians to march forward unhampered. The country in Transylvania is particularly hilly and suitable for defence, and the enemy, while prepared to give ground until he reaches the line where he has decided to make a stand, will no doubt make the task of the Roumanians as difficult and as costly as possible. That he did not exact a greater penalty from the invaders for the possession of the Transylvanian passes was probably due to the fact that Roumania's entry into the war actually did take Austria by surprise. Although there is little official information from the Roumanian side this morning, the enemy appears to be offering his strongest resistance at the extreme south-western and northern points of the Roumanian advance. In the south-west, down near the meeting point of the Hungarian, Roumanian, and Servian frontiers, the enemy is apparently making strenuous efforts to prevent the Roumanians from advancing. To the north of this point, at Herkulesbad, the Austrian communique claims that the Roumanians were repulsed. This communique, which is a feeble official effort to discover a speck of silver in the lowering Roumanian storm-clouds, also mentions the occupation of new positions by the Austrians to the east of Csik Szereda, which is situated away up to the north of Brasso and Kezdi Vasarhely. Further north again, according to the unofficial reports, the enemy is apparently holding positions in the Gyergyo Mountains. In between these two points the Roumanians continue to advance, and, if the Berlin newspapers are correct, the Roumanian line between Brasso and Roterturm Pass is linked up. The troops advancing in this region are now descending the northern slopes of the Transylvanian Alps, and have a downhill journey in front of them as far as Folgaras.

BULGARIA'S PREDICAMENT.

Perhaps the most satisfactory feature of the whole Balkan situation from the point of view of the Entente Powers at the present time is the hopeless muddle in which Bulgaria stands. This little Balkan State, which recently cherished the idea that she was the key to the whole situation in the near East, finds himself surrounded by foes, and in grave danger of early invasion from several directions. King Ferdinand of Bulgaria must remember, with feelings akin to pain, the deputation of ex-Ministers who waited upon him shortly before Bulgaria declared war. On that occasion M. Malinov, the chief of the Democratic party, demanded the immediate convocation of Parliament, as the country was opposed to any adventure in Germany's company. King Ferdinand was warned that the enterprise would be more disastrous for Bulgaria than the second Balkan war, and M. Stambulivski, the leader of the Agrarians, is said to have remarked angrily to the King: "This policy will lead to fresh disasters, and will ruin not only our country, but your dynasty, and may cost you your head." These unpleasant incidents of the past are no doubt still fresh in the mind of the monarch, and, if phrases of this nature were actually used when matters were proceeding smoothly in Bulgaria, there must be a good deal of plain speaking going on in the country at present. Roumania has officially admitted that she has granted Russia the much-desired privilege of a passage for her troops through Dobruja. Many thousands of Russians have crossed the Danube at Reni, and are actually marching through Roumanian territory on their way to exact retribution from perfidious Bulgaria. The Berlin paper, "Vossische Zeitung," states that Bulgaria will declare war on Roumania shortly, but, whether this is correct or not, it should not be long before Russian guns are booming along portion of Bulgaria's northern frontier. Roumania and Russia now appear to have the mastery of the Danube, so that Bulgaria's towns on the southern side of the stream will suffer severely if she forces Roumania in amongst her many enemies. With the Russians, and perhaps the Roumanians, attacking along her northern borders, and the Allied armies in the south driving her out of Macedonia, Servia, and even from her own territory, Bulgaria should shortly begin to realise the disadvantages of fighting on the side of the Central Powers.

IMPORTANT ITALIAN SUCCESS.

The steady progress of the Italians along the Trentino and Isonzo fronts occasionally brings them into possession of mountain peaks of special importance in connection with their general operations. We recently heard of the capture by the Italians of Mounts Cavalazza and Colbricon, and of the narrow pass running between these two towering peaks into the broad Travignolo Valley in the Upper Trentino. The Italian communique published this morning lays stress upon the importance of another position in the Upper Trentino, the capture of which was announced a day or two ago. This is the rocky peak of Mount Cauriol, which rises to a height of over 8000 feet, and is situated about eight miles to the west of the pass between Mounts Cavalazza and Colbricon mentioned above. The Travignolo Valley, to which the Italians gained entry after the capture of these two peaks, follows a westerly direction for some eight or nine miles until it merges into the broader Fiemme Valley, which swerves away in a south-westerly direction towards Trent. The Avisio River, flowing from the north into Fiemme Valley, is joined by the Travignolo River, flowing westward along the valley of the same name, at Predazzo, about five miles to the north of Mount Cauriol, which the Italians have just captured. The roads from the Upper Avisio and Travignolo valleys also meet at Predazzo, and the thoroughfare continues in a south-westerly direction along the Fiemme Valley, passing through the town of Cavalese. Less than half way from Predazzo to Cavalese this road, which is the principal route in this region, passes a point not more than three and a half miles away from Mount Cauriol. The recent success of the Italians, therefore, enables them to dominate this portion of the broad Fiemme Valley, and seriously affect the communications of the Austrians away to the north-east, who are, no doubt, largely depending upon this main road running along the valley. It should also assist the Italians operating near Mounts Colbricon and Cavalazza at the eastern end of the Travignolo Valley.

SPAIN AND THE WAR.

Although voicing the views of the pacificist King Alfonso, in his speech delivered at Bilbao, could not refrain from casting one lingering look backwards at Spain's glorious past. The flag which he now desires to be a symbol of peace has certainly floated over many a battlefield in olden days. But, although Spain has not taken an active part in the great struggle, the consensus of opinion amongst leaders of Spanish thought is greatly in favour of the cause of the Entente Powers. In order to place this opinion on record a manifesto was drawn up some time ago and signed by many of the leading Spanish professors, authors, painters, sculptors, and composers. The signatories included members of all the different political parties in Spain, and they left little doubt as to their detestation of the methods adopted by the Central Powers. "Modestly and soberly," says the manifesto, "we raise our voice to utter these words as Spaniards and as men. It is not fitting that in this, the greatest crisis in the history of the world, the historian of Spain should say that she was inarticulate and indifferent to the course of events; that she stood on one side a barren and insensate rock, or turned her back to the future, to reason and to morality. . . . We stand firm on the side of the Allies, inasmuch as they represent the ideals of liberty and justice, and therefore their cause coincides with the highest political interests of the nation. . . . Most ardently do we hope that when peace comes the lesson may be turned to the honour and profit of all nations, and we trust that the triumph of the cause that we hold to be just will lead to the recognition of the essential part which the life of each nation, great or small, weak or strong, has played in the progress of mankind, will destroy the riot of egoism, domination, and devilish brutality which led to the catastrophe, and will lay the foundation of a new international fraternity, in which force will be directed toward its true object, namely, the preservation of reason and justice."

RECRUITING.

SUDDEN FALLING-OFF.

One hundred and four men volunteered at Victoria Barracks yesterday, and 70 were accepted.

There are indications that the speech of the Prime Minister in outlining the war policy of the Commonwealth has had the most adverse result on recruiting. On Wednesday morning by half-past 11 the recruiting office balconies were crammed, and a long line of men stretched down the steps and away on to the artillery square. Thursday, as soon as Mr. Hughes's policy had become public, saw a drop of 50 per cent. in the day's recruiting figures, and yesterday, at 11.30 in the morning, there were six men only at the office.

"It would have been far better had the Prime Minister said nothing, but kept the matter of conscription up his sleeve," remarked a man at the barracks. "By so doing, and leaving the shadow of conscription over the country, 200 a day would easily have been netted in Sydney alone. The most stirring speeches of what our lads are doing oversea will not bring them to the barracks now that the politicians have backed down and there is no fear of immediate conscription. The whole matter is most disheartening."

One volunteer, however, was of the right kind. He was the son of a squatter, and has an income of £3000 a year of his own. "That is the sort of man who sets the example," said a member of the staff. "He is not going for what he can get, and a mere 6s a day will not lure him to the front. He is the real sport, not one of the 30,000 cigarette-smoking loafers hanging over a fence watching a cricket match, whom General Gordon, when commandant, referred to."

Others included men from the tramways, an orchardist, an analytical chemist, a waiter, a bank clerk, a wool buyer, a farmer from the Macleay River, a bandsman, a butcher, a theatrical manager, a boiler cleaner, an assistant surveyor, a cook, and an architect's pupil.

AMERICAN STRIKE.

NATION INTERESTED.

PROSPECTS FOR MONDAY.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.

The railway situation is creating most intense interest. Individual Congressmen are anxious to avoid antagonising organised labour, and present indications suggest that Congress before Monday (when the railwaymen's order to strike will take effect) will pass a law legalising an eight-hour day for railwaymen.

Meanwhile the managers are pressing the Government to secure authorisation for increased freight rates, but Congress may postpone action in this matter. In effect, the trades-unions have delivered an ultimatum to Congress for the first time in American history, and the whole nation is interested to see whether Congress will back down.

Latest indications show it is likely the strike will be averted, at least temporarily.

The odds in Wall-street are 2 to 1 that there will be no railway strike on Monday.

Later messages say that it is expected that the strike bill, giving an eight hours' day, and providing for an inquiry into the operation of the new system, will be passed by Congress on Friday, and the strike thus averted.

The belief is growing generally that the railroad strike will be averted. Congress is prepared to pass an eight hours' day legislation, with pay as for ten hours, and pro rata overtime. This will be satisfactory to the employees.

IRELAND.

DUBLIN EXECUTIONS.

SKEFFINGTON INQUIRY.

LONDON, Aug. 31.

At the inquiry into the shooting of Sheehy Skeffington during the recent Dublin revolt Lieutenant Dobbin, aged 19, who commanded the guard room, gave evidence that Captain Colthurst took away three prisoners, saying he was going to shoot them. Witness sent a note to the Adjutant, who replied that Captain Colthurst must not take the prisoners, but almost simultaneously with the receipt of the reply witness heard shots and saw the prisoners on the ground.

Replying to the Chairman, Lieutenant Dobbin said he did not defend the prisoners because Captain Colthurst was his superior officer, but he was not actually ordered to give them up. Colthurst simply said he wanted the prisoners and took them. Witness knew that Colthurst was doing wrong, but he was not in a position to say so to his superior.

Witness admitted he had heard a rumour that Captain Colthurst had previously shot a boy in the street.

The inquiry into Skeffington's death has closed.

HEROIC AIRMEN.

DANGEROUS WORK IN BALKANS.

Besides a heavier cannonade on the French sector of the front than usual the past day or two has been noticeable for the greater activity of the flying men both on our side and the enemy's (writes Mr. G. Ward Price, from Salonica, in the London "Daily News"). The enemy's airmen bombed both banks of the Vardar River with the hope of finding a billet in the French camps; while our aeroplanes carried out several useful lengthy raids. English flying men from Thasos raid Bulgarian territory. One result of the bombs was that large fires broke out among the crops. Thus the airmen have done something towards depriving the enemy of stocks of food which might otherwise enable him to prolong his resistance.

High regard should be had for these allied airmen in the Balkans. They fly over the most dangerous country. Places where in case of an engine breakdown it would be possible to land are rare indeed in such mountainous country. They start off on long tours, often at night, knowing that the slightest mistake will mean certain death, and fly a hundred and a hundred and fifty miles with no better guidance than a pocket electric torch, occasionally flashed on the dials of their instruments. Nor is their gravest danger over when they reach home before dawn. With the best skill, the most serious accidents are capable of taking place while landing. The allied seaplanes, too, make long oversea flights entirely unescorted. Some of them have had breakdowns and alighted, fortunately, near islands, where a searching destroyer had been sent out to look for them and has picked them up.

At the Parramatta Police Court on Friday, Leonard Leopold Browning was charged with, at Auburn, on August 30, being the keeper of premises for the purpose of betting. ITALIAN OPERA.

The Gonzalez Company, in addition to the customary two casts, was able to make a third bid for popular favour at the Grand Opera House last night in their production of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci." These revivals involved the debut of a new soprano (Signorina Visoni) and two new tenors (Signori Lois and Balboni). All three did remarkably well, the lastnamed proving a fine vocalist and a tragic actor of rare intensity. Indeed, all through the evening the crowded audience was in a condition of high excitement, and this new programme is pretty certain to prove one of the great successes of the season.

These two operas represent the emotional Young Italy school, the firstnamed, by Pietro Mascagni, first seeing the light at Rome in 1890, and Ruggiero Leoncavallo's chef d'oeuvre following at Milan in 1892. For once in a way Australia was operatically "on the spot," and both operas were staged here as early as 1893 with Signorina del Torre, Giraud, Carleson, and other fine artists in the cast. In accordance with a plan probably arising from the fact that "Cavalleria," with its sudden bursts of emotion is theatrical in effect, whilst "Pagliacci" is finer music of a deeper and more enduring charm, Signor Giovanni Gonzalez conducted the former first. The orchestral prelude, the startling climax of which with the clash of cymbals and beat of kettledrums melts suddenly into a haunting pianissimo melody for flute, was thoroughly enjoyed, and the southern atmosphere of the story was further accentuated by the "Siciliana." In this way Signor Lois was heard from behind the curtain, and a little later the new Turiddu was upon the stage. His voice of lyric quality possesses a soft and liquid timbre which charms, and his graceful figure, and youthful appearance further assisted him with the audience. He sang well throughout, and was warmly applauded after the catchy "Drinking Song."

The artists were generally well placed. Signorina De Revers is a moving actress, a talent she had no opportunity of showing in "Il Trovatore," and she looked handsomely the part of the deserted despairful Santuzza, and sang the "Romanza" with anguished passion. Signorina Rues played buoyantly as the mischievously coquettish Lola, and sang effectively the charming mezzo-soprano air. Signor Scamuzzi, always a clever actor, was completely in character as Alfio, and cracked his whip during the "Waggoner's Song" as to the manner born. The chorus proved much more at home as Sicilian peasants than as lords and ladies. Moreover, they came creditably through the Easter Hymn, a difficult piece of ecclesiastical music, with the people on the stage responding to the choir in the church, until a highly emotional climax is reached. The conductor and his orchestra achieved a triumph in the beautiful intermezzo, in which the nuances were artistically observed, and the enthusiasm was sustained until a repetition was granted.

"I Pagliacci" brought on a light soprano of talent in the petite and piquant person of Signorina Visoni as Nedda. Her voice, employed with feeling and taste, told out brilliantly in the ballatella. Here Nedda answers the cry of swift-soaring birds in a marvellous valse-air, with the whirr of wings to the accompaniment for muted strings, whilst flutes and reeds suggest the distant sounds of remote, aerial song. The new artist acted the surrender in the duet with Silvio with tenderness and tact, and Signor Filippini joined successfully in this beautiful love music. Signor Scamuzzi, quaintly grotesque as Tonio, brought down the house with his dramatic rendering of the prologue, the resonance of his high G dazzling the audience, and leading to a repetition of the latter part of the aria. The new Canio, Signor Balboni, whose comedy by-play with the rustics at once proclaimed his fitness for the role, received an ovation at the close of "Vesti la Giubba," in which the finely expressive voice suggested a heart-breaking despair. The audience was again moved by the consummation of the tragedy at the words "la commedia e finita." All the artists, including Signor Barontini as Beppo, the harlequin, thereupon enjoyed an ovation.

This programme will be repeated to-night. The Fuller management announces "Traviata" for this afternoon.

GERMAN ESCAPEES.

Five of the men who escaped from "Sing Sing," at the German Concentration Camp, Holdsworthy, on July 21 last, were found guilty by the Military Board of Inquiry, and were sentenced as follows:—George Schmidt, 24, 6 months; Ernest Gross, 40, 7 months; Frederick Reidel, 19, Hans Robert von [illegible], 20, and Wenzel Finghaust, 24, each 9 months' imprisonment in Parramatta Gaol, with hard labour. The Orloff case has not yet been decided by the Melbourne authorities. Franz Georgi, 28, is still at large.

INFANTS' FOODS.

Representatives of firms supplying infants' foods waited upon Mr. J. H. Catts, M.P., chairman Commonwealth Prices Board, in Sydney yesterday, and protested against a proclamation issued in Victoria last week by the Federal Government which it is alleged increases the price of infants' foods.

Mr. Catts said he would represent the views put forward to Senator Russell by urgent telegram.

FINANCIAL.

THE BANKING POSITION.

AFTER TWO YEARS OF WAR.

EMINENTLY SOUND.

After two years of war it cannot be said that the banking position of Australia has altered for the worse. In spite of heavy demands on the resources of the community to support the war, there has been an increase in the total deposits in the banks, and if we exclude the investments in Government stocks which are included in the bank advances, we shall be near the mark in saying that the advances have not materially increased. It is proposed to compare the aggregate of the average assets and liabilities of the trading banks in Australia, during the June quarter of this year, with the corresponding figures for the June quarter of 1914, that is, just before the war broke out. This comparison should enable us to form a fairly accurate idea of the banking position. The figures of the Commonwealth Bank are not included. That bank is becoming more and more important in the trading community, but it is essentially the Government bank, and its main figures are the result of Government banking operations, so that their inclusion with the figures of the trading banks might give rise to inaccurate conclusions.

First of all the deposits may be considered. If we separate the current accounts from the fixed deposits bearing interest, we have the following comparison:—

Average of June Quarter.	1914. £	1916. £	Difference. + or —. £
Current accounts	67,406,664	74,126,461	+6,719,797
Fixed deposits	86,600,271	85,530,634	—1,094,637
Total deposits	154,006,935	160,207,095	+5,625,160

The increase in the current accounts is largely due to the recovery from the drought with the consequent increase in yields of wool and wheat, to the high prices realised for our products abroad, and, so far as this State is concerned, to the very free spending by the State Government of loan moneys. There is no doubt that the breaking of the drought aided largely in maintaining the financial strength of the country. Fixed deposits, it will be seen, decreased by a little over a million. This is not surprising. The Commonwealth Government had taken up to June last thirty-five millions sterling in loans out of the moneys of the people. A large portion of this came from the fixed deposits, and from money which would otherwise have gone to the fixed deposits. The loan had its double appeal. There was the appeal to patriotism, and there was the investment appeal, especially that part of it which spoke of the freedom from income tax. It was on account of the Government coming into the market and giving 4½ per cent. that the banks were forced to increase their deposit rates, and with the increase of deposit rates an increase in the amount charged on advances was made. It is not meant to be inferred that the Government should [illegible] course in offering the rate of 4½ per cent. On the contrary, it was the wisest course it could adopt; but at the same time, it must be recognised that with this rate the bank rate had also to be increased. The wonder is not that the fixed deposits have not increased, but that they have not decreased more.

A comparison of the advances without any explanation is apt to be misleading. That comparison may be made as follows:—

	Advances.
June quarter, 1914	£118,846,522
June quarter, 1916	£133,575,879
Increase	£14,729,357

This increase would appear out of proportion to the increase in the deposits, more especially as the fixed deposits have shown the slight decrease noted above. But this must be recollected. The advances include those portions of the first and second war loans taken up by the banks, amounting in all to over four and a quarter millions sterling. Here, again, the Commonwealth Bank figures are not included. The advances also include the advances made to the farmers against wheat certificates up to £11,000,000 in the June quarter. That indebtedness to the banks has now been practically wiped out by the loan made to the Commonwealth Government by the British Government; or, in other words, an advance made by the latter Government against the Australian wheat crop. Next quarter's advances will show the effect of that clearance of indebtedness; but, on the other hand, they will also show the amounts which the banks took up in the third war loan. Another factor in the advances was the way in which some of the State Governments have leant on the banks. On the whole, therefore, it may be doubted whether there has been any material increase in the ordinary advances and other operations classed under that heading for the financial dealings of the trading community.

The soundness of the banking situation depends almost wholly upon the amount of coin and bullion, and in these days this holding combined with the holding of Commonwealth notes. In estimating the position a banker is guided to a great extent by the ratio which these bear to the total deposits, and to the liabilities at call. The coin and bullion and the Commonwealth notes held by the banks may be considered in conjunction with the coin held by the Commonwealth Treasury. That comparison is as follows:—

	1914.	June quarter. 1916.	Difference + or —
Coin and bullion	£36,092,975	£26,288,503	—£9,704,472
C'wealth notes	4,977,001	19,943,497	+ 14,966,496
Total	41,069,976	46,231,000	+5,261,024
Coin Commonwealth Try.	4,200,000	16,000,000	+11,800,000

It will be remembered that when steps were taken by the Commonwealth Government to increase the note issue the banks agreed to lend the Government £10,000,000 in gold without interest. That accounts for the decrease in the banks' gold holdings. Otherwise the position has strengthened rather than otherwise. The ratio of coin and bullion and Commonwealth notes to the total deposits has advanced from 26.33 in 1914 to 28.65 in the last June quarter, and the ratio of the assets to the liabilities at call has increased from 59.2 to 60.82.

As to the future, we must not try to anticipate too far ahead. Speculations of what may be the position 12 months from now would be futile. We can only take thought of the very immediate future. Just in front of us is the financing of the wool clip. There need be no fear on that score. The money will be received either here, or will be put to our credit in London. Towards the close of the year will come the wheat crop. That finance operation was successfully accomplished last year without any hitch. Much will depend on the Governments declaring their intentions early.

ARTHUR COCKS AND CO., LTD.

The report of the above company covers the 12 months ended July 31. It shows a net profit for the period of £10,531. An interim dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. on the preference shares, paid on March 1, absorbed £751, while the board now recommends dividends at a similar rate, absorbing a further £751. A dividend of 10 per cent. on ordinary shares absorbs £5409, and the balance, £3619, after payment of any taxation not provided for, is recommended to be transferred to the reserve account. The balance carried forward from 1915—£919—was placed to the reserve fund. Confirmation of this action is sought. A clerical error in the extension of the stock sheets recently discovered, resulted in a further ascertained profit for the year 1915 of £1086. The following comparison may be made:—

LONDON MARKET CABLES.

BUTTER VERY DULL.

LONDON, Aug. 31.

Butter is very dull. Buyers are holding off the market as much as possible owing to the high prices. Danish is rather easier owing to a temporary increase in supplies. It is quoted at about 200/ per cwt. New Zealand makes are nominal, pending the new season's shipments. For September shipment from New Zealand 186/ c.i.f. is asked. A few sales have been reported at 182/.

CHEESE.

The market for cheese is steady. New Zealand and Canadian makes are quoted at from 102/ to 104/ per cwt.

The Government's prohibition of the export of rennet has caused the stoppage of some parcels bought for Australian cheesemakers. The attention of the Agents-General has been directed to the matter.

SUGAR.

Sugar is unchanged.

BRADFORD TOPS.

The Bradford tops market has a healthy tone. There is more inquiry. Prices are:—64's, 53d (1d lower); super 60's, 52d (1d lower); common 60's, 51d (1d lower); 56's, 39½d (½d lower); 50's, 32½d (½d lower); 46's, 28d (unchanged); 40's, 26½d (unchanged).

CEREALS.

The wheat market is quiet, and prices are slightly easier. Australian grain ex quay is quoted at 72/6 a quarter of 496lb.

Flour is firm. Australian is commanding from 49/ to 50/ a sack of 280lb.

Peas are firm at unchanged prices.

Beans are steady. There are no New Zealand samples offering.

Oats are firm, and there is little offering. New season's shipments from La Plata are offered on spot at 31/3 a quarter of 304lb.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

Trade in the general markets was again dull yesterday, but on the whole values were maintained at about late levels. Manufactured metals went out in small lots to both town and country, but there was very little parcel business, although some "cheap" lines were offering. Holders of I.C. coke, 20 x 14 tin plates, continued firm in their demands for 40/. Sheet lead and lead piping were dearer. Full rolls of sheet lead were worth £37 a ton, and cut rolls 38/ per cwt. Lead pipings in coils brought £42/10/ a ton, and in 10ft lengths, £43/10/. There was no change in the position of fencing materials.

Sodas again attracted attention, and several parcels changed hands at advancing prices. Caustic soda was quoted at £41/7/ c.i.f. and e., which would mean a landed cost of about £43 a ton. Against this, spot stocks were to be had at from £35 to £38. Similarly, the c.i.f. and e. price of soda ash was £26/19/6, or a landed cost of £28/10/, compared with a local price of £12/10/ and £12/15/. Bicarbonate of soda was quoted at £16/7/6 c.i.f. and e. or about £17/4/, delivered into store. The spot price was £12/10/ a ton.

These was a better tone in the jute market, and prices were very firm. Cornsacks, ex the Chindwarra, were sold at 8/6, and October-November deliveries at from 8/7½ to 8/8 net to rails. Branbags were dearer at 7/6 net. Woolpacks were quoted at from 3/9 to 3/10 net.

LONDON METAL QUOTATIONS.

PRICES BOARD.

On Tuesday at 10 o'clock representatives of the wholesale and retail milk trade will be called upon to show cause why the price of milk should not be reduced.

PRICE OF BREAD.

A variation in the price of bread, as far as booking charges are concerned, is announced by the Federal authorities, to take effect from Monday next. The extra halfpenny per loaf hitherto charged when bread was booked may not now be charged when the bread is paid for within seven days.

WAR MEDALS.

In answer to a suggestion he made to the Prime Minister, Mr. Holman has now received a reply, stating that badges are about to be delivered for issue to soldiers who have returned from active service and have been discharged. The Prime Minister adds that the issue of war medals will doubtless be undertaken by the Imperial authorities at the conclusion of the war.

SCHOOL OF ARTS AND TAXATION.

A deputation from the Sydney School of Arts waited on the Lord Mayor on Thursday to make representations in support of a request preferred for exemption from unimproved capital value rates. It was pointed out that the institution was founded by Act of Parliament in 1833, and had been on the same site ever since. It was not run for profit, and could only be dissolved by Act of Parliament. It was very largely an education centre, and practically an adjunct of the Technical College. In fact, the technical education system of the State had had its beginnings in the School of Arts. For a period of 76 years it had been exempt from land tax, and was now free from the Federal land tax. The finances of the institution were going from bad to worse, largely as the result of the reduction in the subsidy received from the State Government.

The Lord Mayor expressed his sympathy with the deputation, and stated he would refer the matter to the finance committee. He would also like to see the School of Arts represented on the deputation which was to wait on the Minister for Local Government in connection with proposed amendments to the City Corporation Act.

PROTECTION OF NATIVE RACES.

The annual meeting of the Association for the Protection of Native Races was held at the Bible House, Pitt-street, during the week.

Mr. Bruce Smith, M.P., commenting on the report of the work for the year, said that the scarcity of news of striking events was to be regarded favourably, inasmuch as it indicated an improvement on the condition of the native races, for the benefit of whom the society existed. Certain suggestions with regard to the New Hebrides would be made to the authorities when the war was over.

The Rev. Dr. Bromilow said he was glad to say that in some parts of the Pacific there were signs that the gradual disappearance of the natives had been arrested. This was notably the case in Fiji.

STATE ELECTIONS.

At a meeting of the executive of the P.L.L. on Thursday evening Mr. G. A. Burgess was duly endorsed as the selected Labour candidate for the Burrangong seat. Messrs. Lenton, Devlin, Harris, Carr, Hackett, O'Brien, Felton, Hilliard, Birks, Fletcher, and Donellon were endorsed for Waterloo, Mr. J. J. Connelly's endorsement being deferred pending the result of an inquiry.

Interest has been stimulated in Liberal ranks in the Hartley electorate by the selection of Mr. H. C. Coggins. The sitting member is Mr. J. Dooley.

STAGNANT MARKET.

Another day of deadly dulness was experienced on the Stock Exchange yesterday, notwithstanding that Trong dredging shares during the latter half of the afternoon opened at 19/10½, or 1/3 higher than their closing price on Thursday, and in a couple of transactions advanced to 20/3. Vegetable Creek tin shares also rose /2 on the day's sales. Copper was left alone throughout the day, and silver stocks showed a disposition to droop. Investors were not inclined to speculate in these lines unless they could find the goods on the bargain counter.

Edna May Deep Levels opened at 36/3, or /8 below their price on the previous day, and declined a further /1½; while Edna May Centrals were 1/6 lower than on Thursday in the morning, and 2/ less in the afternoon. Black Range West, however, were sold at 4/, an advance of /3 on their price of Wednesday.

SCHOOL OPTICIANS.

The Minister for Education stated yesterday that no authority has been given to anyone to visit schools and supply glasses for defective sight. The medical officers of the department, after testing the eyesight of school children, prescribe glasses, and arrangements have been made by the department with several well-known reputable firms for the supply of these glasses at a cheap rate.

THE CREMATORIUM.

Replying to a representative deputation from the Vaucluse municipality, which waited on the Chief Secretary, Mr. Black, to oppose a proposal which is well advanced to establish a crematorium in that district, the Minister said the matter would be further considered in the light of the objections raised. An effort would be made to secure a site elsewhere, that would give less dissatisfaction to the residents.

DISTRESS IN DUBLIN.

A meeting will be held in the Town Hall on Monday evening to aid in relieving the present acute distress in Dublin and other parts of Ireland.

STATE SESSION.

NO BUSINESS READY.

UNEXPECTED ADJOURNMENT.

There was an unexpected adjournment of the Legislative Assembly at an early hour last evening. The Government programme for the sitting had been composed of measures in charge of the Minister for Lands, Mr. Ashford, and the Minister for Labour and Industry, Mr. Estell. Both these Ministers, however, had gone out of town earlier in the day. There being no other business ready for the House, Mr. Cann was reluctantly compelled to agree to an adjournment till Tuesday next. The Premier, who had made quite a number of engagements at Parliament House for last night, was obviously annoyed. The matter will probably be discussed at a meeting of the Cabinet early next week.

UPPER HOUSE REFERENDUM.

Mr. Cusack asked the Premier whether he would take the referendum on the abolition of the Upper House at the same time as the conscription referendum.

Mr. Holman: "The suggestion is a very pregnant one. I will give it consideration."

THE BUTTER SHORTAGE.

Mr. Bagnall asked the Attorney-General if he did not think the time had arrived for drastic action in connection with the butter shortage in this State.

Mr. Hall said there was no room for two Governments in the business. The Federal Government had now taken it over, and the local shortage was doubtless due to the fact that higher prices were ruling in Western Australia, South Australia, and Victoria than in New South Wales. The local supplies were being sent away to the other States. "I have the same difficulty at Rose Bay as everybody else," said Mr. Hall. "Yesterday we sent for 2lb of butter and could only get half a pound. It is no use putting these questions to me; I am out of the business." (Laughter.)

BANKRUPT LIFE ASSURANCES.

Mr. Colquhoun drew the Attorney-General's attention to the decision of the High Court, which declared that the proceeds of an assurance policy on the life of a deceased undischarged bankrupt belonged to the official assignee of his estate. In view of the admitted hardships which this judgment entailed, said Mr. Colquhoun, would the Attorney-General bring in a short bill to remedy its effects?

Mr. Hall said the decision referred to was a direct over-ruling of a case decided by the Chief Justice (Sir Samuel Griffith), Mr. Justice Barton, and the late Mr. Justice O'Connor in Western Australia some years ago. "I understand," he continued, "that the case is likely to go to the Privy Council. If that is so I shall take no action; but if not I shall consider the introduction of legislation at the earliest opportunity." (Hear, hear).

HOTEL CLOSING HOURS.

The Attorney-General, replying to Mr. Robson, said it was not a fair thing to ask either this Parliament or the people at the present time to cast a vote as to what should be the permanent closing hour of hotels after the war.

THE FARMERS' SIXPENCE.

Replying to Mr. Ball, the Minister for Agriculture stated that arrangements were being completed for the payment to farmers of the additional 6d per bushel on their wheat in the Australian pool. The money, he said, had been promised in August, and would not be much longer delayed.

GERMAN RAILWAY MATERIAL.

Answering the deputy-leader of the Opposition, Mr. Fuller, the Premier said the total amount of money paid to Krupps, and other German firms for railway material by the New South Wales Government from January 1, 1908, to June 30, 1916, was £632,407 11s 4d. The yearly proportions were:—1908, £6952 4s 9d; 1909, £48,161 12s 9d; 1910, £29,861 1s 10d; 1911, £137,992 16s; 1912, £152,051 10s 6d; 1913, £172,192 9s 11d; 1914, £85,195 15s 7d; 1915, nil; 1916, nil.

THE COMPULSION REFERENDUM.

Mr. Cohen asked the Premier if he had received any communication from the Federal Government as to the referendum to be taken on compulsory service. "Are a majority of the electors and a majority of the States required before effect can be given to any vote that may be cast in favour of compulsion?" he queried.

The Premier said he had received no communication, and did not anticipate receiving any. He expected that whatever announcement was made would be made generally to the citizens of Australia.

Mr. Fallick asked if the Premier would agree to a resolution being moved urging that soldiers at the front should be afforded an opportunity to vote on the referendum by proxy.

The Premier thought it would be impertinent for the House to discuss such a resolution at that stage. When the matter was referred to the people of the State it was likely that all public bodies could, and would, express opinions on the subject.

The deputy-leader of the Opposition: Will you consider the appropriateness of setting apart a day for discussion of the subject?

The Premier: I can say no more than that I am not convinced that it would be an appropriate matter for discussion in this House at this stage.

REPATRIATION APPEAL.

The Premier, in reply to Mr. Bruntnell, said he was opposed to the setting aside of a special day of appeal on behalf of the Voluntary Workers' Association, to be known as "Women's Day." In fact, he intended shortly to ask the House to support him in the policy of clearing the ground awhile of all appeals that might compete with the great repatriation appeal.

WATER ACT AMENDMENT.

The Minister for Agriculture moved that consideration be given in committee to the expediency of bringing in a bill to amend the Water Act, 1912. He explained that the Government had power, in the past, to borrow £200,000 annually for water conservation, but it was now intended to place the amount before Parliament each year. The motion was agreed to, and the bill introduced and read the first time.

VOTES FOR SOLDIERS.

Mr. Black moved that on the next sitting day the House should consider in committee the expediency of bringing in a bill to give an opportunity to persons absent on service to vote by proxy.

RAILWAY CONSTRUCTIONS.

The Minister for Works moved that the Public Works Committee be asked to report upon the following lines of railway:—Yanco to Griffith; Gilgandra to Tooraweenah, Artarmon to the Field of Mars Cemetery, The Rock to Pulletop.

The motion was agreed to.

At 5.35 p.m. the House adjourned till Tuesday next.

BANK NOTE CASE.

ACCUSED AGAIN REMANDED.

At the Central Police Court yesterday, Henry William Bradbury, 29, Leslie Grummit, 26, John James Ferguson, 46, and Frederick John Morgan, 28, the men who were arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the forgery of £5 banknotes, were again remanded until Friday next by Mr. Macfarlane, C.S.M. Bail was refused.

Police Prosecutor Spyer, who asked for the remand, explained that the inquiries which the police had to make necessitated the postponement of the hearing of the case. One of the suspected principals, O'Neill or Tye, had absconded from his bail, after his arrest at Melbourne, and that also had prevented the case from being gone on with. He was not certain that the police would be ready by next Friday. About 5000 notes had been put off in various States, and numerous inquiries had to be made.

His Worship said that the accused had been remanded on different occasions during the past three weeks, bail being refused, and if the case was not proceeded with next Friday, consideration would have to be given to the question of bail.

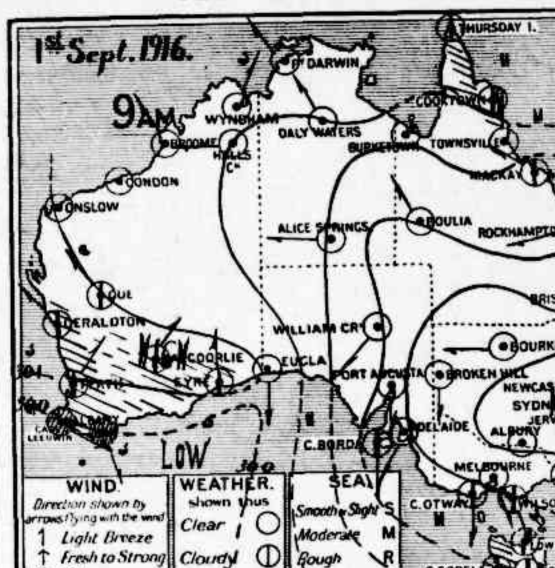
COURTS-MARTIAL.

The following members of the A.I.F. have been tried by District Courts-martial and sentenced as under:—

Private Albert Morris (2035), 18th Battalion, 90 days' hard labour, and to be discharged with ignominy, for (1) absenting himself without leave, and (2), conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in personating an officer; Private R. S. Griffiths, A/19th Battalion, Casula, 90 days' detention for deserting; Private F. Woodford, N/46210, Depot Battalion, Newcastle, 180 days' hard labour for stealing goods belonging to a comrade. The confirming authority has suspended the execution of the sentence during the good behaviour of the accused. Private G. A. McMullen, C/19th Battalion, 90 days' detention for deserting; Private H. G. Thorne, Reinforcements, 18th Battalion, 28 days' detention for deserting; Private J. T. Kelsey, A Company, 36th Depot Battalion, 90 days' hard labour for (1) drunkenness and (2) striking a superior officer.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



The extensive high pressure which covered the whole of Australia on Thursday is moving steadily eastward; it has also gained slightly in barometric values.

The centre at 9 a.m. yesterday was situated between the Darling and the coast, and consequently we may expect some fogs between Jervis Bay and Port Macquarie.

The energetic Antarctic disturbance, which was in evidence off the Leeuwin on Thursday, has surged southwards, and now just touches the fringe of the south-west coast.

A new high pressure has penetrated Western Australia from Carnarvon to the Coolgardie goldfields. Except for some showers on the extreme north coast, fine weather should rule generally; the winds should be northerly, with milder temperatures.

Ocean Forecast.—Squally northerly around Tasmania; south-east gales on the Queensland coast.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Metropolitan racegoers will this afternoon have the choice of horseracing at Moorefield or pony and galloway racing at Victoria Park; the Newcastle Jockey Club caters for northern sporting folk at Broadmeadow; Victorian sportsmen assemble at Caulfield, where the V.A.T.C. holds its September reunion; South Australian Tattersall's Club holds its September reunion at Morphettville; and the Boulder Racing Club opens its annual meeting on the W.A. goldfields.

Owners and trainers are reminded that the general entry for the A.J.C. Spring Meeting closes at 4 p.m. on Monday next with the secretary, Mr. C. W. Cropper. For the 19 events on the card, for which nominations are invited, the added money aggregates 13,200 sovs, and all classes of horses are catered for. At the same hour first forfeit falls due for the Derby, Epsom Handicap, The Metropolitan, the Breeders' Plate, and the Gimcrack Stakes.

The programme for the Moorefield September meeting this afternoon should attract a large gathering to that popular convincing ground, inasmuch as many of the horses listed for the afternoon's sport hold engagements in the important events to be decided at Randwick and in Victoria during the spring. The track is reported in excellent condition, and the general arrangements are up to the customary standard. The transit service by rail includes special trains, leaving the Central Railway Station at 11.15 a.m. (horses), 12.25, 12.37, 12.46, 12.54, 1.6, and 1.15 p.m., while the ordinary service to Kogarah will also be available. The sport commences at 2.10 p.m. with the Hurdle Race, in which Loughrea, Garthowen, and Inverara may pass the post in order; Red Pennant, Caresectta, and Faithful Laddie may occupy the situations in the Three-years-old Handicap; Sydian, Barraconda, and Delinacre may divide the honours in the Flying Handicap; the places in the Kogarah Stakes may be filled by Lambourne, Thrace, and Mandento; Lady Minnie, Bay Rum, and Toa Tele may get home as named in the Club Handicap; and Royal Parade, Grail, and Snapdragon may claim the attention of the judge at the finish of the Rockdale Mile.

The added money for the Spring Meeting of the Rosehill Racing Club on the 16th inst. totals 1510 sovs, of which 735 sovs endows the Rosehill Guineas, for which nominations have been closed. Of the other items on the card for which entries are invited by the secretary, Mr. Geo. W. S. Rowe, up to 4 p.m. on Monday next, the most important is the Spring Stakes, a w.f.a. race, with penalties and allowances, run over a mile, and is endowed with 250 sovs. This race affords a dress rehearsal for the big w.f.a. races, to be decided at Randwick in the near future. The Rosehill Handicap carries 150 sovs, and each of the other events 125 sovs.

Pony and galloway racing will be the attraction at Victoria Park this afternoon, and the customary seven-events programme promises interesting sport. The track is good going, and the general arrangements first-class. Owing to the number of entries a couple of the races will be run in divisions, and a commencement will be made at 1 p.m. The transit arrangements by rail include special trams from Circular Quay and the Railway-square loop; while the ordinary service to Zetland will also be available. The results of the racing may be anticipated as under:—Maiden Handicap, first division, Bob Steel or Larry Field; second division, Prince Ibex or Evelyn Rouvray. Flying Handicap, first division, Lady Merv or Moving Picture; second division, Crown Gem, or Holadena. Hurdle Race: Lord Castlereagh, Neroon, Wembimble. Fourteen-one Handicap: Simmeress, Miss Coolie, Postfield. Encourage Stakes: Fireplay, Office Boy, Haidee Darling. Victoria Park Handicap: Oafield, Auriga, Lady Whitton. Fourteen-two Handicap: Marie Clare, Little Merv, Hautchester.

An excellent bill of fare has been provided by the Newcastle Jockey Club for its September Meeting this afternoon, and metropolitan visitors can reach the scene of operations in ample time by the trains leaving the Central Railway Station at 6.40, 8.15, 8.35, and 9.20 a.m.; while the return trip can be made the same day by the train starting from the coaly city at 6.35 p.m. A tram service runs between the railway station and the racecourse, and the first race is timed to start at 2 p.m.

The half-dozen events on the card for the Wyong Park fixtures of Tuesday next attracted 84 nominations, yesterday, of which the Maiden Handicap was responsible for 18; Flying Handicap, 7; Novice Handicap, 17; Wyong Park Handicap, 18; Three-Years-Old Handicap, 11; and Welter Handicap, 15.

Messrs. H. Chisholm and Co. held a sale of racehorses on Thursday, but, though 16 were catalogued, the only sale was that of b g Bibbenluke, by Reminder from Corrie, aged, to Mr. E. L. Jones, for 15 gns.

SUGGESTION FOR THE REFERENDUM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It is the duty of every loyalist and lover of his country to be up and doing to maintain the traditions of our motherland, from whose blood the great majority of my brother Australians have sprung. Might I suggest the inauguration of a fighting power to counteract the evil influences of those opposed to compulsory service. Unless the Universal Service League can take the matter up with vigilance, an independent league should be immediately formed to fight the cause of freedom and liberty throughout the Commonwealth of Australia. If the referendum is taken, let the result be such that we show that we in Australia are loyal to the backbone. I trust, therefore, that all loyal British, as well as representatives of the allied forces, will get busy and support a movement to defeat our adversaries.

I am, etc., GEO. T. CLARKE.

WAR QUESTIONS.

"M. J." (Glebe).—The initials stand for "Australian Divisional Base Depot, c.o. Australian Post-office Service," but you should not use them. You should use your son's original number, company, and battalion, and the address is not "France," but "On Active Service Abroad." You can purchase printed envelopes which are official at any post-office.

"Mrs. E. J. C." (Alexandria).—The amount £4 4s per fortnight is correct; the maximum that you can draw is 6s a day.

"Query" (Balmain).—(1) No, therefore (2) does not need answering.

"Soldier's Cousin".—The official address is "On Active Service Abroad," and none other is recognised. Your best plan would be to call and see the Superintendent of Mails, G.P.O., Martin-place, yourself.

"A. McG." (Glebe).—As the Prime Minister has not yet fully explained matters we are unable to help you as far as information is concerned.

"Anxious" (Paddington). He is liable to be called up, being single.

RANDWICK-ROAD.

The Lord Mayor (Ald. Meagher) stated yesterday that the Kensington Racing Club had declined to make any contribution towards the cost of the scheme for the widening of Randwick-road, and the Royal Agricultural Society had given a similar reply. CURTAILING COURTESY.

LATE MR. MARTIN KENNEDY.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

The estate of the late Mr. Martin Kennedy, of Wellington, a director of the Bank of New Zealand, has been sworn at under £150,000.

MOUNT LYELL SMELTERS.

QUEENSTOWN (Tas.), Friday.

Affairs in connection with the industrial trouble over the non-union question remain unchanged, and smelting operations at the reduction works are proceeding as usual. No limestone was sent from the quarry to the smelters to-day, but it is understood it will be possible by a metallurgical alteration in existing methods, to continue smelting without using limestone, but increased costs will result under these conditions.

ONE BIG UNION SCHEME.

It was stated at the last meeting of the Sydney Labour Council that the intention of the one big union scheme was to link up the unions in each industry in groups, with a common executive to deal with matters of common interest. Each union would retain its present domestic autonomy. The whole organisation would be controlled by an executive, representing the whole of the groups. A further conference to deal with the proposals will be held to-day.

Messrs. O'Brien (Furniture Trades) and O'Neill (Boilermakers) were elected as the council's delegates to the conference.

FRANCE'S HEROINES.

SOLDIER'S TRIBUTE.

A LETTER FROM THE TRENCHES

The part that women play in war, whether at the front or staying at home, is eulogised in a letter written by Private W. Hooper to his adopted mother, Mrs. N. A. Johnson, of M'Pherson-street, Waverley, from "Somewhere in France," on June 14.

In the course of this letter he says:—

"We have now been in France some three months—eleven weeks of which have been spent in the trenches. We were given a great reception by the French, and had a three days' and nights' journey in the train—a journey I shall never forget. Some of the women met us, waving one hand and wiping the tears from their eyes with the other, at the various stations. Poor souls, they no doubt had lost husbands, brothers, fathers, or sweethearts at the front, and yet in their sorrow strove to give us a welcome and a cheery send-off. Truly the women of France are heroines, if ever the world held any. Travelling on through the country what strikes one most is the way women have taken over men's work. You see them hard at it engine cleaning, in the railway goods yards, driving all sorts of carts, and in fact doing almost anything. Old men and women, only just able to get about, are to be noticed in the fields doing the ploughing, etc. The country itself is a revelation to us; the fields are one mass of poppies, buttercups, and daisies, and most of the hedges consist of may, with its rich scent. White and purple lilac are to be seen everywhere, and bushes of them can be seen on No Man's Land—the narrow strip of country which separates our first line of trenches from the Germans.

"I was fortunate enough to have time to pay a visit to what had once been a big manufacturing town, which not so very long ago was in the hands of the Germans. The enemy still continue to lob shells into it from long range. The destruction is dreadful, hardly a house but was damaged by shell fire, and the streets are full of debris, while the factories are silent, only the bare outer walls standing, and those mostly pierced by shells and in danger of falling. I have witnessed the same wanton destruction in small villages. It seems terrible that war brings so much destruction. Of course the Huns are not particular who or what they fire on. I have seen them pour shells into a farmhouse and completely destroy it, when they had nothing to gain by such an action. They may have the poor satisfaction of knowing that they have robbed poor innocent people of their home and all they possess. It made my heart ache to stand there and see the aged owners standing some distance off and watching their home being destroyed out of mere wantonness. This particular farm had been held by one family for over 100 years, and the scene I saw that day brought home to me how thankful you in Australia should be, and also the stern fact that our own homes in Australia will never be quite safe until the Huns and all their horrors are wiped out of existence."

ABORIGINAL SOLDIER.

STORY OF DOUGLAS GRANT.

It is not generally known that several aborigines have gone with the Australian military forces to the front. One of the most remarkable of them is Douglas Grant, who left Sydney with reinforcements last week. He was ready to go a couple of months ago, when he passed the sergeant's examination, but at the last moment a Government official discovered a regulation preventing an aboriginal from leaving the country, and, much to his disgust and to that of his comrades—for he was one of the most popular fellows in the company—Grant had to stay behind until last week, when the authorities gave the required permission that enabled him to leave.

Douglas Grant is the adopted son of Mr. Robert Grant, chief taxidermist at the Australian Museum. It is nearly 30 years ago since Mr. Grant, while on an expedition in northern Queensland, came across him in a gunyah in the bush. Douglas was then only a child of about two years. His father and mother had been killed in a tribal disturbance, and Mr. Grant decided to adopt him, and bring him south. He was sent to the home of Mr. Henry Grant, senr., at Lithgow, and soon manifested a taste for drawing. He also took a keen interest in the cadet movement. On reaching manhood he entered Mort's Dock and Engineering Company, and for 10 years was employed there as a draftsman, being one of the most proficient. Outdoor life, however, naturally made a strong appeal to him, and two or three years ago, having gained experience as a woolclasser, he accepted a position at Belltrees, Scone, the homestead property of Mr. H. L. White. This young aboriginal soldier is a man of high attainments, with a great love for Shakespeare and poetry generally. He is a very good artist, and plays the bagpipes as well as any Scot.

WATTLE LEAGUE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Governor-General has forwarded the following message to the Australian people through the Wattle Day League:—"We are right to dedicate one day to the wattle tree, whose golden blooms are Australia's most beautiful decoration. Such celebrations are a reminder of our duty to make the utmost of the beautiful material placed in our hands by Providence, whereby we are enabled to fill our waste places and our public highways with flowering trees and shrubs of unequalled beauty.

"The Wattle League has done much to give a practical turn to the affection felt by us for Australia's national flower, by protecting growing trees, encouraging planting, and directing public attention to the different varieties and the possibility of growing specimens in almost any situation. The influence of the Wattle League increases every year, and will be seen more and more clearly in the ever-growing beauty of our woods and gardens."

EARLY HOTEL CLOSING.

BRISBANE, Friday.

In the Queensland Legislative Assembly Mr. M. J. Kirwan presented a petition bearing the signatures of 86,918 electors, and covering a distance over two miles in length, protesting against the early closing of hotels.

WOOL AND GRAIN STOREMEN

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Before Mr. Justice Powers in the Federal Arbitration Court the hearing was resumed of the plaint by the Federal Storemen and Packers' Union against representatives of the wool, skin, hide, and tallow industry in the various States. Witnesses for the claimant organisation deposed that work in the wool and grain stores was as strenuous as wharf labourers work or wheat stacking. Overtime should be paid for all work done before 8 a.m. and after 5 p.m. The solution used for spraying poisoned skins caused the workers to lose their appetities and to get cracked and festered fingers. The hearing will be continued on a day to be fixed.

C.E.M. SOCIETY.

The seventh annual conference of the Church of England Men's Society of New South Wales was held yesterday at the I.O.O.F. Temple. The Rev. W. L. Langley presided.

The report of the Provincial Council showed that eight new branches had been formed, and that a very useful field of work had been opened up, which dealt with the supervision of cases released on probation from the Children's Court.

In the evening Archbishop Wright, in his presidential address, said that in these days they had to show what they were made of. He knew from some chaplains who had been and are now serving at the front what good work had been done by the society. He was thankful to the members for the splendid work they had done in connection with the Children's Court.

Motions dealing with the "Repatriation of Our Soldiers," "The Society's Standpoint in the Mission of Repentance and Hope," "Boy Problem," "Men for Holy Orders," and "Censorship of Picture Shows," were dealt with and affirmed.

Referring to the repatriation of the soldiers, the Rev. W. L. Langley said that the Church must get into personal touch with the returned men.

INTERCESSION SERVICE.

The United Service of Intercession in the present time of war continues in Pitt-street Congregational Church every Tuesday at 1 o'clock.

SCHOOL CLINICS.

MINISTER AND B.M.A.

The Minister for Public Instruction, Mr. Griffith, yesterday replied to the statements made in an article in the current issue of the "Medical Journal," and published in yesterday's "Herald," on the subject of school clinics.

"I shall take the last sentence of the article, which states:—'The reason why the Department of Education cannot secure the services of doctors for its wrong-headed scheme (medical inspection and treatment) is because the doctors know that the best interests of the children will not be served by it.' "I prefer to answer this," said Mr. Griffith, "by stating actual facts officially recorded in the department. During 1915 examination by the department's medical staff showed that, exclusive of the pupils examined and treated by the travelling hospital and travelling clinics, there were 45,049 school children suffering from some remediable defect. Of these only 19,367 have obtained treatment. This means that 25,682 of our school children failed to obtain treatment for defects diagnosed by the school medical staff. For example, out of 4394 suffering from eye trouble 3507 failed to obtain treatment, and 7288 out of 9642 failed to obtain treatment for defects of the nose and throat.

"Now, contrast this state of things with that obtaining where it was possible for the pupils to be treated by the school medical staff," he continued. "During 1915 the travelling hospital treated 2358 pupils, the travelling dental clinic treated 2934 pupils, the travelling ophthalmic clinic 4479, and the metropolitan dental clinic 1834. In all, 11,605 pupils found to be defective as the result of school medical inspection received treatment from the staff of the school medical branch. If it had not been for the action of the B.M.A. in preventing its members from accepting positions upon the school medical staff these figures would this year have been trebled.

"So far," said Mr. Griffith, "the B.M.A. has made the health and proper physical development of our children subservient to what it believes to be financial interests of its members. The only alternative scheme suggested by this organisation is one which would place the brand of pauperism upon those of our school children the financial position of whose parents would compel them to accept the services of the departmental specialists. This I am determined not to permit.

"I think it would be as well to let the public see the real motive actuating the committee of control of the B.M.A.," concluded the Minister, "by stating that the only communication received by the department from that body bearing on the present controversy was as follows:—'Is it the intention of the department to confine the medical treatment to school children, and to those school children whose parents cannot afford to pay private fees for the medical attendance required; and, if so, whether the association may take it that a guarantee of such limitation is given by the department?' "Comment on this would be superfluous."

FEDERAL STEAMERS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Federal Ministry has decided upon the agents to act in the various capitals for the Commonwealth line of steamers. The firms are:—Victoria, Messrs. The head offices of the line will be London, where the manager (Mr. Larkin) will reside.

CASUALTIES.

TRAM ACCIDENT.

William Harold Campbell, a tobacco presser, living in Hall-street, Auburn, was riding in a tram at Kensington on Thursday, when the car left the rails. Campbell was thrown out and jammed against a telegraph pole, sustaining such injuries to his left leg that the limb will have to be amputated. The Civil Ambulance took him to the South Sydney General Hospital.

SOLDIER'S SUICIDE.

YOUNG, Friday.

Private Jas. Mathers, aged 25, a soldier in the Australian forces, shot himself dead with a revolver at Monteagle, near Young, this morning. Mathers, when back on final leave, became ill with muscular rheumatism and lumbago, and was in the Sacred Heart Hospital at Young until yesterday. Deceased was a native of Scotland.

NO DESERTION.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

It was stated recently that a member of the New Zealand expeditionary forces had deserted to the enemy. The Minister for Defence, however, has received official information that the man in question, with five other New Zealanders, is a prisoner of war in Germany.

MENTAL ASYLUMS.

The report of the Inspector-General of the Insane, which was tabled by the Chief Secretary in the Legislative Assembly, stated that arrangements were being completed for dealing with soldiers returning from the front with nervous and mental afflictions. A special hospital had been lent by the N.S.W. Government, but the numbers requiring to be dealt with were not large. The number of admissions of all cases during 1915 to the hospitals was 1346, a proportion of 1 in 1288 of the population.

ACTION AGAINST NEWSPAPER.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A majority of the Full Court to-day upheld the verdict of the jury in the County Court in the action brought by Detective Bell and Constable Sickerdick against the proprietors of the "Argus" newspaper. Bell and Sickerdick claimed £500 damages for alleged libel, and the jury awarded each of the plaintiffs 1s damages, but Judge Moule, holding that the words complained of were incapable of being construed into a libel, gave judgment for the proprietors of the "Argus." The Full Court to-day set aside the judgment of Judge Moule, and restored the verdict of the jury, giving costs against the "Argus."

CLAIM AGAINST A UNION.

WEST MAITLAND, Friday.

At the District Court to-day, before Judge Fitzhardinge, Joseph Charlton, a miner, formerly of Cessnock, and now of Coledale, sought to recover £100 damages from the Cessnock miners' lodge and officers for being deprived of work in consequence of his objecting to pay the district levy of 6d a fortnight for patriotic purposes. Plaintiff alleged that defendants conspired to induce the Caledonian Collieries Company, Ltd., not to employ plaintiff, and induced the company to discharge plaintiff from its employ. His Honor said he would give his decision to-morrow.

AUSTRALIANS PROMOTED.

Captain J. R. Macdonald, of Neutral Bay, has received word that his son, Alex. Warren Macdonald, has been promoted lieutenant. Lieut. A. W. Macdonald left Australia in May last as platoon-sergeant.

Wilkins recently took part in a raid in which out of the ten men participating only he and another returned. He was made lance-corporal for his conduct, and the next heard of him was that he was wounded.

ACCOUNTANCY.
ACCOUNTANCY.
IMPORTANT NOTICE.
We desire to make it clear to all office men that the Accountancy Examinations are open to all men. We find an impression gaining ground that only clerks in the employ of Public Accountants are eligible, which is quite wrong. Anyone can compete, except as regards one institute. Probably not 10 per cent. of the men at present studying are in the profession, or have any desire to be.
These Examinations are fully recognised as THE qualifying test for ALL office men who desire to produce the best evidence possible as to their fitness for a high-grade position. In fact, so many men are now qualifying that they are setting the "standard of efficiency" for all others. The man without his Accountancy diploma is right out of it when applications are called for qualified and competent men.
Employers know full well that the qualified man is the man they want—and he is the man sought for.
No Clerk can hope for real promotion and success, in these days of strenuous competition, UNLESS HE QUALIFIES.
Take up our Full Course of Instruction and you are bound to succeed.
Full particulars supplied on application FREE of any expense or obligation on your part.
Write without delay.

DON'T PUNCH A TIME-CLOCK
ALL YOUR LIFE.
Whilst human cogs are necessary to the machinery of business, there is no reason why you should be one of them—grinding away day in and day out on a wage which barely gives you living, let alone luxury. If you are willing to succeed you can succeed. All that is necessary is training, which will enable you to successfully carry out more important work. Make yourself worth more, and you will get more. We have trained thousands of young people (and older ones, too), for positions of trust. If you are willing to work, we can do the same for you.

In the next month or so large numbers of Australians will be called to the Colours. This means that scattered all over Australia will be opportunities for trained women. But it is essential that ONLY trained women should apply for these positions, because they are the only ones who will be able to satisfactorily do the work. If you have not profitably employed your spare time in the past, now is the time to enrol, as a Stott and Hoare Student. We can give you training which will enable you to make good in one of these 200,000 positions—give you training that will enable you to do "bigger" work and get a better salary.

ISAAC PITMAN'S SHORTHAND holds the
WORLD'S RECORD FOR SPEED
WITH ACCURACY.
You cannot afford to experiment with an inferior system, and thus become poorly equipped for a commercial career.
Nearly 200 different systems have sprung up since the invention of PITMAN'S SHORTHAND, but none has succeeded in ousting it from its position as
THE LEADING SYSTEM.
Pitman's Shorthand is the recognised British system, and you will find that 90 per cent. of the men who have "made good" in the Shorthand world—Hansard Reporters, Court Reporters, etc.—are users of the Pitman System.
The Principal of Stott and Hoare's famous Business College in Sydney writes:—
"Pitman's Shorthand has been taught by Stott and Hoare's Business College for the past 32 years. This well-known College has not yet been able to find a system to compare in reliability with Pitman's."
STOTT AND HOARE'S BUSINESS COLLEGE TEACHES NONE OTHER THAN PITMAN'S SHORTHAND.
A complete prospectus may be obtained at STOTT AND HOARE'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, Remington House, Liverpool-street, HYDE PARK, SYDNEY.

"MADE BY DAVID JONES."

Do you realise what that phrase means to YOU? The guarantee of correct style, expert workmanship, and true economy assured by it?

Behind the statement—"Made by David Jones"—is a reputation of seventy-eight years' standing, a tangible proof of the old maxim—"Honesty is the best policy"—a reputation built and upheld by the name of a firm whose word is even more than their bond. Be it in the advertising of goods, the manufacture, or actual sale of the merchandise—a company who desires not only to get your custom, but to KEEP IT on actual merit.

The continuance of old customers and the constant addition of new ones are greater proof than words of the complete reliance and satisfaction associated with the name—"David Jones."

In addition to this assurance comes the essential factor of the present day—TRUE ECONOMY.

This is effected by purchasing goods which serve their purpose to the greatest advantage, and cost the least money consistent with reliability.

True economy in all goods "made by David Jones" is demonstrated thus:—

1. The purchase of the materials direct from the producer means the complete cutting out of the wholesalers' profit.
2. The actual making up of the articles by the retailer means total elimination of the manufacturer's profits.

These savings enable David Jones' to purchase superior quality materials, devote more attention to careful finish, and offer you better goods at more moderate prices.

OVER 1000 EXAMPLES
WILL BE EXHIBITED
IN OUR WINDOWS
ON MONDAY NEXT.

An examination by you of any of these goods "made by David Jones'," and a comparison with whatever you can find that approaches them will readily prove that the values are the soundest and our merchandise all we claim for it.
Full particulars of next week's practical demonstration will be given in large illustrated advertisements in all to-morrow's and Monday's papers.

METHOD OF REMOVING SUPERFLUOUS HAIR EXPLAINED.

In the hundreds of letters that I have received from women who are afflicted with Superfluous Hair on face, neck, or arms, I find there are a number of questions and answers that usually arise.
I have, therefore, arranged a series of Questions and Answers.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Q.: IS YOUR TREATMENT PAINFUL?
A.: Not in the least; only a slight stinging sensation, which is not pain.
Q.: DO YOU GUARANTEE THAT THE HAIRS WILL NOT RETURN?
A.: Yes; I guarantee to destroy every hair treated, and will gladly REMOVE A FEW HAIRS FREE, and you can wait a few weeks to convince yourself before you make another appointment.
Q.: DOES YOUR TREATMENT LEAVE ANY MARKS OR SCARS?
A.: No; you can go out to any function if you take the precautions given to you.
Q.: HOW LONG WILL IT TAKE?
A.: That depends entirely upon each individual growth. If slight, four treatments may be sufficient.
Q.: WHAT ARE YOUR FEES?
A.: I take away a specified number for the charge of £1/1/. Call and have a chat with me for further information.

FACE MASSAGE
I also specialise in. My system restores the features; it is also for the Removal of Blemishes, such as Blackheads, Pimples, etc. Try one treatment. If you cannot come for a treatment, and have a dry skin, send for
